POOR MARGARET.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY F. J. WILLOUGHBY.

It pleased us well, when we were boys,
(And hardly thought 'twas wrong,)
To hoot and make unseemly noise,
Thereby to drown her song.

For Margaret, they said, was mad!
It made us laugh with glee,
The worn, old face, so brown and sad,
The shrivelled lips, to see.

Those lips, we thought, were never red,
The cheeks, as fair as girls',
And th' hair beneath her cap, we said,
Was never worn in curls.

And though oftimes the schoolmaster
Grew strangely grave and white
Whene'er he heard us talk of her
With jest and mocking slight,

We nothing cared; behind our book
We'd whisper, half in dread,
How grand the bald old man would look,
Were he and Marg'ret wed!

A silent, distant man was he,
Whose bosom seemed to hold
A troubled heart, that would not be
Uplifted or consoled.

Amazed, we stared with all our eyes,
The evening that we met
The schoolmaster, so old and wise,
Walking with Margaret!

Oh, how we shouted, when, one morn,
As forth we went to play,
We saw the tassels of the corn
Strung round her head so gray!

It mattered not the fun we made—
She never said a word;
And when, one day, we all essayed
To steal her singing bird,

That trilled within its home made cage,
We surely thought to see
The crazy woman in a rage—
Her eyes beseechingly

Gazed into ours, and filled with tears,
And, blushing and ashamed,
We dropped the cage and ran with fears,
While each the other blamed.

We loved to pluck the unripe fruit
That grew behind her house,
And well our wanton minds 'twould suit
To scare away her cows—

Two gaunt, unclean and famished beasts
That broused upon the brake
And weeds that fringed the road. What feasts,
We jeered, their frames would make!

Sometimes we used to hedge them in,
And each and all would try,
In some old, battered cup of tin,
To milk their udders dry.

The village butcher used to say—
And how it made us laugh!—
A gale, some day, would blow away
Old Marg'ret's cows like chaff!

But ah! erewhile our mirth was turned
To sadness and dismay,
When, from the schoolmaster, we learned
That she had passed away;

That she had gone to mansions built
Nor planned by minds of men!
Ah! then we knew how deep our guilt—
How wicked we had been!

I mind e'en now, although my hair
Has lost its olden brown,
How, on my cheek, then fresh and fair,
The warm tears trickled down.

When, in the school house, still as death,
We stood up in a row,
And heard the while, with stifled breath,
The master's voice so low.

He told us she had gone from earth,
Where reason would return;
That she had found another birth
Beyond the stars that burn.

And then, from next his heart, he took
A picture in a case,
And, one by one, he made us look
Upon the shadow-face.

A sweeter, dearer face than this,
We thought, we'd never met;
And when we raised our eyes to his
With tears we saw them wet.

And straightway, then, our easy tears,
We knew not why, fell fast,
And some, grown wise beyond our years,
His secret knew at last.

The face, he said—dear school master!—
Within the casket set,
Was, years ago, the face of her—
Poor, crazy Margaret!

ONE STONE TOO MANY.

THE DOINGS OF A BAD BOY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY C. EDWARD.

It was after school hours one evening that a gronp of boys lingered in the yard of a certain school, amusing themselves with throwing stones. It was forbidden to remain in the yard after school had closed, but, on this particular evening, the teacher had hurried away before the scholars had left, and the fascination of disobeying a regulation with impunity was too strong to be resisted by this band of urchins.

Stone throwing was also a tabooed thing about the school at all times, on account of the danger to windows, but there is often a manual instinct towards rebellion in the boy organization. So they threw stones to their hearts' content. At first they confined themselves to such targets as the fence, or the trees in the yard; then they began throwing in the air, notwithstanding the fact in physics that the stones which went up had to come down again; and thereby endangering themselves. For these boys were not good boys, like those described in books; but very bad boys, such as every school is liberally supplied with.

One boy—Job Walters—must have been the worst; for he was strongest, threw the highest and was looked upon with awe by the rest. Another—Tim Doggett—was a sly sneak of a boy. Any one can understand him without further description.

"Job," said Tim, after the former had cast a stone to an unprecedented altitude, "do you think you could throw higher than the top window?"

"Why, I have already," was the answer, "I throwed away above the roof."

Job was not strictly grammatical. Some boys are not.

"I didn't see you," Tim rejoined.

"Well, look then!"

And, as the words left his mouth, Walters sent a pebble whizzing through the air, which went clear over the tall building. It was a strong throw, and as Walters looked at his companion with a triumphant expression on his countenance.

Tim seemed rather disappointed, and said, after a moment's hesitation:—

"You kin throw strong, but I don't believe you kin throw straight."

It was a sneaky speech; one of the kind which always provokes.

"Just you show me a mark, and see if I cant," was Job Walters' stout response.

"I'll bet you can't come within six foot of one of the top winders," insinuated Master Timothy.

"You'd like to get me licked, wouldn't you, you little sneak," uttered the other lad, rather warmly; "I could do it if I wanted to, but I'm not going to get into a scrape."

"I don't see what you're afeared of; if I could throw that high I would'nt mind. No one would see you, if you did break a glass."

"I'm not afraid,"Job rejoined.

"Well, then, try!"

"Yes, try it!" cried several of the other boys.

"You wouldn't any of you peach?" queried Walters, looking suspiciously at the group.

Ah, no! They were all, like Brutus, honorable men! Job still hesitated, looking about to see if they were observed. There was no one could look over the high walls of the yard, and certainly no one within the enclosure. But he stood undecided even yet.

"Just try once."

It was the insinuating voice of Dogret.

"You can't hurt anything trying once."

Job Walters set his teeth hard, repressed something like a sigh, and said:—

"All right; I will, and I'll break a window, too, see if I don't! But you boys must all keep mum about it. If any of you let out on me I'll thrash the sneak half to death!"

With these direful words, Job picked up a good sized pebble, and flung it up towards its goal, straight as the flight of a rifle ball. His aim had been but too true. There was crash of broken glass, pieces of which came tingling down to the yard. The boys looked a little frightened.

Almost at the same moment an old man's head was thrust out of a window in the basement of the school, and the following words saluted the startled youngsters:—

"Now, then, you boys, clear this yard right off, I know every one of you, and I'll report all this to Mr. Williams."

The speaker was the janitor of the school. Mr. Williams was the principal teacher.

The boys became afflicted of a sudden with an intense meekness, and slinked away without a word of reply.

When school assembled next morning these wicked youths were all in their places; but they were uneasy, and scanned with anxiety the countenance of their teacher. The broken window was in their own room, and was a desolate looking monument of their flagitious conduct.

The eyes of Mr. Williams had turned towards the shattered light several times as school was being organized by the calling of the roll; but he did not seem to notice our malefactors in particular and they breathed freer. Perhaps after all the janitor had been generous and had not divulged upon them. After school had quieted down for the day's routine, the teacher pointed to the broken glass.

"Does any one know how that window was broke?" he asked.

He paused for a reply. There were some burning cheeks among a portion of the scholars, but no response; a blank, painful silence followed the question.

Mr. Williams looked very serious, perhaps disappointed. After a brief pause, he again asked:—

"Were any of you boys in the school yard after school was dismissed?"

Some few voices answered, "No, sir;" most of the boys were silent. None said "Yes, sir."

Had these boys been of the good stripe, they would undoubtedly have magnanimously confessed their fault, and courted the punishment their disobedience merited. But our heroes were cast in another mould.

They scrupled not to screen themselves by deceiving.

Whether they would have absolutely told a lie is another question; leaving Doggett, the sneak, aside, probably none of them would. But, as can be seen, they were practically acting a falsehood. We are constrained to repeat that they were very bad boys. And these boys soon learned, too, that they were not pursuing the best policy.

The teacher slowly took from his pocket a folded slip of paper, which he drew slowly between his fingers as he continued:—

"Boys, wildness and occasional disobedience are to be expected in the young. I do not consider a boy vicious or depraved, even when he is what I often style 'bad.' But there is no excuse for deceit. It is mean, and you should all avoid it."

He said this very slowly. Then he paused as if in expectancy, before he added:—

"Now, if any of you who hear me were in the yard last evening, I would like you to acknowledge."

This time his appeal was not fruitless. Job Walters stood up in his place, and said:—

"If you please, I was, sir!"

Job was not a good boy, or his confession would have come much sooner. George Washington acknowledged his little cutting experiment on the first impulse, and George Washington was released without punishment. Job Walters—we are telling his fate.

"Come out to the front, Job," Mr. Williams said. The boy came out to the front, and stood quietly, with flushed cheeks and eyes down. The teacher still stood, as if waiting for more culprits to respond. But if so he was disappointed.

"I am sorry that those who shared Job Walters' guilt do not imitate him here. I have the names of some boys on this paper whom I wish to step up with Walters as I call them."

And much to the horror of the guilty party, he called out the name of every boy who had been in the yard, beginning with Timothy Doggett. The boys came creeping up to the front, with very sheepish and very frightened countenances. After they had all assembled, the teacher said:—

"I am sorry you scholars have not been more open with me, you would have found it the best course. Now I wish to know who threw the stone which broke the glass?"

There was just one moment's silence, and then the voice of Tim Doggett was heard:—

"It was Job Walters."

Every boy kept his head down, as if ashamed of his companion's meanness. Nor was Tim's head held up as he spoke.

"Is that true, Walters?"

"Yes, sir,"

Mr. Williams stepped back to his desk, from which he took an instrument of torture and terror to the scholars, in the shape of a lithe rattan.

"It seems to me, Walters, that you are old enough to appreciate the foolish bit of malice of which you are guilty. I see no excuse for such wantonness."

Job looked down thoughtfully a moment; then he raised his eyes to his teacher's, and answered in a firm voice, though with nothing in it of defiance:—

"I want to say a word, Mr. Williams, and yet I don't wish you to think I'm trying to creep out of what I did, either. I just want to tell you that I'm not the only one to blame here." Then he stopped, in hesitation. The teacher looked at him fixedly.

"You had better speak out."

"Well, I will; though I don't like to seem to tell on another boy. But this little sneak here of a Tim Doggett"—

"Come, come, no names."

"I don' care," roared out Job, "he is a sneak, and he urged me on, and if it had'nt been for his sneers I'd never have thrown at the window."

"That's so!" cried several of the boys, inspired by Job's increasing boldness.

"Never mind," continued the latter young gentleman. "I'll pay him up when I get a chance, mind that!"

"I have heard enough of this," said the teacher in a very severe voice. "Job, hold out your hand."

But the boy did not. He looked up instead, and said:—"I am willing to take what I deserve, but I want Doggett whipped too, he's as bad as I am."

"That's so I decide," cried several of the other boys.

"Well, you shant whip me, unless you—you're going to serve him the same way."

"Will you hold out your hand?"

"No!" cried the boy, flushed and heated, and regardless of the consequences.

Job was most deplorably wicked. Deeds and not words were required now. There was a crisis, as both teacher and scholars well knew. Mr. Williams seized Walters by the collar, and struck him a sharp blow on the shoulders.

Job was a strong fellow and a quick one. He suddenly wrenched away from the schoolmaster's grasp, took advantage of a peculiarity in the latter's position to dart between his legs, and ran out of the room. The teacher fell over against a desk, though without injuring himself. The boy seized his cap, which hung in the hall outside, and rushed down stairs, and then out of the building.

The master seemed nowise flurried by the sudden resistance. As soon as he knew that Job had escaped, he punished in turn the whole party, Mr. Doggett being the recipient of an especial number of strokes. Then he went on with the routine of lessons.

That evening he called at the house of the rebellious pupil, and had an interview with Job, and also his father. The result was that Job came to school next morning, as usual, expressed an open contrition, and stood a severe thrashing without a murmur. Nor did he even fulfil expectation by avenging himself upon Doggett.

The sketch is now completed. There can be no doubt that the narration has been that of wickedness. Were the usual "moral" to be deducted, Job Walters must of necessity have turned out a bad man. But Job is a jewel; if I has completed a very successful school career, not unchecked perhaps with a fair modicum of "scrapes." Yet he has been generally liked, both by teachers and fellow scholars; and he is now a rising assistant in a large mercantile house, and most assuredly, as the phrase goes, "doing well."

The conclusion we are forced to is, that our black sheep have white spots and our white ones are not immaculate. We are good and we are bad, only in a degree. Our heroes are never perfect, and our worst villains have their virtues; and because a schoolboy is a wild fellow, or even a genuinely bad fellow, it is not always safe to forecast for him a life of evil. All of which philosophy comes from Job Walters throwing one stone too many.

ALINE LE ROY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY RENA RIDEAU.

"Mother, did Doctor Danton say I would be well enough to attend the grand ball at Grainger's Hall to-morrow night?" asked Aline Le Roy, as she lay upon her pillow, white and pale as a snow-wreath, just convalescing from a severe illness.

"No, my daughter, he did not; but, on the contrary, advised that you should not, and added that it would be dangerous; he said if you are careful and prudent you may be able to go out in a week or two."

A shadow of impatient anger gathered on the lovely brow of the invalid; "he is an old dolt if he thinks I am to be pent up in this room forever; I have been taking his sovereign remedies three weeks already; one would think if there were any virtue in them it would manifest itself before now; that is the way with those old doctors, they keep a patient down as long as possible, but I will not submit any longer; mother, do send John for Dr. Fontaine, I know he will give me something to remove this dreadful languor; it is that that keeps me down so long. I have fully made up my mind about the ball, I would not miss it for anything; why, it is to be the most recherche affair of the season, and besides I think that Belle Forrest has been queening long enough."

"Don't talk any more now, Allie, dear," said Mrs. Le Roy, frightened at the state of excitement her daughter had wrought herself into; "I will send John immediately, and in the meantime, order you some nourishment; now be perfectly quiet, I will return soon," and she left the room, afraid to oppose Aline's wayward temper by venturing to advise her against her determination.

Aline turned wearily on her pillow when she had gone, and pressed a small, white hand upon her temple as if in pain; then closing her beautiful eyes, until the long silken lashes rested upon her marble like cheeks, she lay silent; but she was not sleeping; beautiful she was indeed; beautiful as the fairest embodiment of a poet's dream. As she thus lay in the silence of her chamber, she was thinking of one who had sought and won her young heart's pure devotion; but where was he now? He had not even called to see how she was; she had heard a rumor that he was bowing at the shrine of another, not as fair as she; but beautiful and fascinating as a fairy queen. Ah! was it any wonder that she had become weary and impatient of her long imprisonment in a sick room?

"Mother," she said at length, when she heard her return. "I wish you would send Fanny round to Madame Geraldine's, to ascertain if she has completed my dress; and order the pearls for my hair; and, mother, be sure that Janet has everything else in order for me."

"Yes darling, I will; but here is wine and something to nourish and strengthen you."

"Ah! the bell; the doctor has arrived."

* * * * * * *

"Oh! what a lovely evening; what a delightful time I shall have at the ball; I feel such buoyant spirits; and it is so pleasant to think of being emancipated at last," said Aline, coming from the window, her face radiant with pleasant anticipations. "Mother, Madame is a jewel; if I had sent for him first I would have been out long ere this; I hope cousin Harry received my note. Here Fan, come and dress me, I am not strong enough to assist you, but deeming your taste equal to mine, I submit myself to your skilful hands. Madame Geraldine really put the superlative on that dress. Oh! it is most lovely," and she looked with admiration upon the soft shining folds, as it lay gracefully upon the bed ready to envelope the beautiful form of the destined queen of the evening.

"Miss Aline, I do not think I can add another touch to the perfect completeness of your toilet; come, look at yourself," and the accomplished maid led her before the large mirror. Aline glanced with a look of triumph at the resplendent reflection before her, and her heart swelled at the thought of the triumphs the evening would bring; the ascendant star of her rival would pale and decline before the re-appearance of hers, she thought.

At this moment Mrs. Le Roy entered the room and gazed with proud fondness upon her only child. "You are looking lovely, Aline; your illness has only enhanced your beauty instead of detracting from it; you will have an opportunity of winning back your truant admirer, the proud, princely Durand."

Aline's eyes flashed like electric sparks as her mother spoke these words:—"Yes, win him back and spurn him," said she, with all the spirit of an injured woman speaking from her expressive face.

Mrs. Le Roy perceived she had made a mistake and tried to divert her daughter's mind by speaking of something relating to her dress; "There's cousin Harry at the door now; go, Fan, and tell him I will be ready in a moment; mother, dear, please help me to get on my wrappings; be careful to not disarrange my berthe; those pearls are superb; now kiss me good night."

"Aline, my child, don't dance too much nor take too much ice, to-night; you are running a great risk; I shall be uneasy until your return; tell Harry to take good care of you."

"Don't be uneasy, mother dear; I feel perfectly well, and I will be very prudent; prudent as an old maid," and a merry laugh came floating merrily back to her mother's ears as she swept down the stairway.

After she was gone Mrs. Le Roy strove to drive away the foreboding fears that crept into her heart, and she heaved a deep sigh as the sound of the wheels died away upon the street.

Grainger Hall shone with a resplendency of light, and the grace and beauty of the most select circle of the city were gathered there. The band had just commenced a favorite and popular waltz. Aline and her cousin took their places on the floor, and were soon whirling away among the giddy throng of dancers.

"Heavens!" exclaimed Walter Durand, who had only just arrived with the beautiful Miss Forrest; "Tell me, Hazelton, who is that lovely creature waltzing with Harry Edgar?"

"Methinks you ought to know her," said the young man addressed, with a slight, scarcely perceptible sarcasm in the tones of his voice; "that is Miss Le Roy; she has come out again since her illness, looking lovelier than ever."

"Aline Le Roy here to-night," said Miss Forrest with a start. "Why Dr. Danton told me only two days ago that she was dangerously ill; I wonder if he is aware that she has come out?" and the mortified beauty bit her ruby lips in chagrin, for she felt her reign over Durand was at an end.

"Yes, he is aware of it, and gave his advice to no purpose, to prevent her coming; he said he feared it would cost her life;" said a nephew of Dr. Danton, as his gaze became riveted upon Aline's figure floating gracefully past.

"Beautiful, superbly beautiful," was heard upon every side, and every eye seemed bound by a spell upon the beautiful waltzer.

"This will never do," murmured Belle Forrest to herself; and accepting the arm of her escort she joined the dancers; her cheeks flushed and her eyes flashed like twin stars, and if Walter Durand had not been carried off beyond redemption by the re-appearance of his bright particular star, he would have been caught by their dazzle.

The music and the dance went on:—

"To sleep till morn when youth and pleasure meet,
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Durand was dancing with Aline, and, as he bore her along, he felt her light form grow heavier upon his arm, while her head drooped lower upon his shoulder; at length all motion ceased, and she lay lifeless in his arms.

"Oh! my God; she has fainted!" exclaimed Harry Edgar, springing forward to relieve Durand of his lovely burden; but Walter retained his hold and bore her toward the door, exclaiming "make room, she must have air."

They gave her fresh air, and sprinkled water upon her still white face in vain; only once, when Walter was bending over her, did the beautiful eyes unclose, and the paling lips utter the low words, "Walter, you are the cause of it all."

They carried her home, and there was mourning in the mansion of the Le Roys; there was "crape on the door," but this outward symbol of grief was only a faint expression of the deep agony that rent the mother's breaking heart; too late she saw that she had not performed her duty by curbing the wayward temper of her only and idolized child.

From that distressing scene Walter Durand came forth a changed man; those last low, softly spoken words, that bore with them no window of reproach, told him he was forgiven, yet they were ever ringing in his ears like the funeral knell of his last hopes, bringing with them that despair which in a measure he feels that he deserves.

After kissing the cold lips of the only woman he ever truly loved, though he trifled with another, and pressing her waxen hand, he made a vow ever to shun the society of woman, and bade adieu to his native shores.

He now wanders, a stranger in strange lands, and is resolved to fill a stranger's grave in some unknown, unmarked spot, where the simple verdure of the earth will cover him forever from the sight of men; his face yet wears the look of despair it assumed the day he gazed for the last time upon the dead face of his ill-starred, beautiful Aline.

"Double or Quits."

Every night we used to assemble at a shanty called the "Go-a-head" restaraunt, and there we would drink ourselves blind, very often winding up with a fight, in which knives would be used, and some ugly wounds given. Lucky diggers would play cribbage, or brag, or a game of euchre, for pinches, or ounces of gold, and hundreds or dollars, or rather pounds, would change hands in an hour. There was one gambling digger we called "Double-or-Quits," because when he lost the game he would cry "double or quits!" and lose again, would cry "double or quits!" again; and then "double or quits!" and "double or quits!" again, until it was all "quits" with him, and he had nothing to double with. He was one of the luckiest diggers round about; wherever he struck his pick, gold seemed to spring up and beg of him to take it. He worked like a nigger all day; and when he had made fifty or sixty ounces, he would go and get rid of it at "double or quits." He had a drop of drink in him most times; was not the only time by a great many—and he kissed a barmaid. When she boxed his ears for it, he caught her round the waist, and cried "double or quits!" and kissed her again. He came to a queer end, did "Double-or-Quits." He had a quarrel with a digger, and they agreed to fight it out. They staked a considerable amount on the fight, and "Double-or-Quits" licked his man closely, and was declared the victor. "I'll give you again to-morrow," was the unlucky pugilist. "All right," said "Double-or-Quits;" "we'll fight to-morrow for the same amount, 'double or quits.'" They fought the next day. "Double-or-Quits" rushed at his man at the opening of the contest, "double" he cried, as he delivered a stinging blow. "Quits," cried his adversary, and he hit "Double-or-Quits" a tremendous one on the side of the "knowledge box," which sent him to grass, senseless. "Double-or-Quits" never recovered from that "sockdollager." He took to his bed, and died a week afterwards. He was crazed all the time he was sick, and did not know any one about him. But all that week he was at his old game—playing cards—and crying out "double or quits." A minute before he died he jumped out of bed, and looked before him in a fright, thinking, perhaps, that old Nick was by his side, and had come to fetch him. "Double or quits!" he shouted, and then, as if he had lost the game and couldn't pay up, he threw up his arms and dropped down dead. Such is life in the wilds of Australia.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

MISS LISLE RIDDELL.

The subject of this sketch was born in Monmouthshire, Wales, March 4th, 1852, consequently is now in her 19th year. Her first appearance before the public was made in St. John, N. B., in the autumn of 1866, at a concert given by the officers of the British ship of war Cordelia, the aid of the sufferers by the great fire in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. At this concert she met with great favor and received the most flattering notices from the entire press of that city. She is petite in form, has a beautiful and expressive face, of purely Anglo Saxon type. On the stage her style is graceful, pleasing and modest. Those who have heard her, assert that, as a vocalist, she has few superiors, and that, in a short time, and with experience, as a vocalist and comedienne she will become an ornament to the stage and the profession.

OLD FAMILIES OF THE BRITISH STAGE

AND

THEIR AMERICAN CONNECTIONS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

It is an admitted fact that we find less of the hereditary principle in the theatrical profession than in the generality of other callings with which we are acquainted. In law, physic and divinity, the arts, and even the trades, how often do we see a transmission from father to son even for several generations, but how seldom on the stage! There are, however, exceptions to this rule and some of them derived from an English source, which it may not be profitless to advert to here.

Starting from the data of eighty years since, we find most prominently placed on the English stage the family of the Kembles. Then John Kemble and his sister Sarah (afterwards Mrs. Siddons) were rising rapidly to an eminence which, when attained, they continued to hold for a long time. Their brother Charles, too, was also earning for himself a golden reputation, to be eventually inherited by his yet unborn daughter Fanny, now living in the United States and known as Mrs. Butler. The elder Kembles, with another brother named Stephen, were the favorites of our grandfathers, and all the children of an itinerant manager and actor. In them we recognize a startling exception to the rule we have mentioned—in them and their descendants, too, the Masons (Charles, John and Jane) familiar to the playgoers of both hemispheres thirty years ago, being the nephews and niece of John Kemble and Mrs. Siddons. Miss Mason became the wife of Hilliard, the scene painter; John, a physician in Philadelphia; while Charles, we believe, resides in New York. He continued in dramatic business until a very recent date, and, we believe, has not entirely relinquished his theatrical avocations. He, his brother and sister were long connected with the old Park Theatre.

The families of Edmund Kean and William Macready were also theatrical by descent. The father of the former was a well known performer of his day, and his mother and his aunt were actresses. The elder Macready was a manager as well as an actor, and it was from him that his son inherited that passion for the sock and buskin, which induced him to relinquish his studies for the church, on which he had already commenced, for the perilous aspirings of a theatrical tyro. The name of the younger Macready is too intimately connected with theatricals in America to need much present blazon; suffice it to add, that he who bears that name is living yet in England, at the ripe age of 77.

He has no descendants on the stage, but his great contemporary, Edmund Kean, left one, in the person of his son, Charles, another English actor, well known to theatrical audiences this side of the water. He, like many of his craft, has passed away, leaving a wife and daughter, the former an actress, who has now retired from the practice of her art forever.

All the families we have mentioned were theatrical by descent to a certain degree, but we have yet to name a family which stands alone in the records of the British stage, in having been regularly connected with it for more than two hundred and fifty years. The name of that family is Cooke, a member of it having been associated with Shakespeare in his management of the Globe and Fortune theatres, London, as may be seen on reference to a copy of the original patent granted to the great dramatist himself. A large number of this family were connected with the English theatres in the times of the Kembles and the Keans—George Frederick, the tragedian, who lies buried in St. Paul's churchyard, New York; T. P. Cooke, the delineator, par excellence, of the British sailor; Tom Cooke, the vocalist and orchestral leader; James Cooke, the bass singer; his daughters, Mrs. Lennon Rede and Mrs. George Thomson; his neices, Mrs. W. West and Mrs. Woylett; his nephews, Henry and Frank Cooke; indeed, there was a time when, of this old theatrical family, it was said that, commencing with the highly approved London performer, it only ended in the little boy then playing the children's parts to Miss O'Neil, when she was "starring" in the Kentish circuit. The only professional representative of this family now living is Mrs. Herman Vezin.

The Wallack family, of American as well as of English repute, was one hereditary in the profession, the father of the brothers Henry and James having been a public performer. Beside the two sons married, he had daughters who went upon the stage, and they marrying professional men, had children who followed in the old track. James Wallack married Miss Mary Johnston, daughter of a noted actor; and Lester Wallack, the New York comedian and manager, is the first of that union. Henry Wallack married Miss Jones, an English actress, and, dying a short time since, left as his professional representative his son James W. Wallack, Jr. His daughter, Fanny (Mrs. Moorehouse), was a favorite New York actress, and died many years ago. Of the Wallack family, however, there are but three belonging to the stage at the present date—the two gentlemen first named and Mrs. Alfred Wigan, of the London theatres, daughter of Mrs. Usher, the sister of Henry and James Wallack.

The Vinings are another race who claim a theatrical lineage. Of these there were, some thirty years ago, many persons on the English stage. They have, however, dwindled down till all left of them is comprised in a simple trio—namely, Mr. George Vining, late of the Princess' Theatre, in London; Mrs. John Wood, of the St. James', and Mrs. E. L. Davenport, wife of the American tragedian of that name.

The Fisher family were connected with the stage for many years, and, perhaps, in the matter of numbers, at any given period, can claim the first place in the records. We were, ourselves, acquainted with three generations—that is, contemporaneously. Several of this worthy and very clever race came out to America, where they are favorably remembered to the present day. Among these, John Fisher, and his sisters, who subsequently became Mrs. Vernon and Mrs. Maeder, the latter having been the "infant prodigy" of other days, who acted Richard, Shylock and other Shakespearean characters when scarce more than a baby. Mr. Charles Fisher, of Wallack's, is a member of this family.

The Trees fill a prominent nook in theatrical annals. It must be about a hundred years since the name appeared in the English play bills; that of a comedian and vocalist, who, many years afterwards, married, his offspring being four daughters:—Martha, a danseuse at the Italian Opera House and Drury Lane, London; Maria, the original Clari, who eventually married a wealthy gentleman named Bradshouse; and Ellen and Ann, the respective wives of Charles Kean and John Kemble Chapman, of the London Sunday Times. Relative to Miss Maria Tree it may be worthy of observation that, as the original Clari, she had to sing for the first time the ballad of "Home Sweet Home!" the joint composition of Henry Bishop and John Howard Payne, the former an Irish musician, the latter an American writer, at the time he wrote the libretto of a ballad since become a household hymn all over the civilized world, suffering the extremes of poverty and privation in Paris.

The Bruntons, the Didiers and the Fawcitts were all old theatrical families—the former embracing John Brunton, the comedian, and his three daughters, of whom the second (Sarah) was the most gifted. This lady became the wife of Frederick Yates, the celebrated manager, actor and mimic, and the mother of Edmund Yates, the novelist. Her aunt (an actress in her day) was married to one of the earls of Craven. Both her two brothers were actors for some time; John, the younger, was subsequently a lieutenant in the British navy, and sailed a voyage of arctic exploration with Captain Parry; the elder, Richard, went into theatrical management in Birmingham and Plymouth. The entire family, however, is now extinct in a professional sense.

The Didiers and the Fawcitts, both numerous, intermarried, but not one of them is connected with theatres—Mrs. Theodore Martin (late Miss Helen Fawcitt) having retired from the stage.

The Loders, too, were very numerously represented in the English theatres, and claimed a hereditary connection with the same. One of them—the gifted and genial George—passed the latter part of his professional existence in this country. The race, however, has died out of its professional associations, and neither in the United States nor in England has it a present or living name in that direction.

We must not omit mention of the Blanchards; in doing so we should be committing an injustice to the family itself, and to our American readers also. The elder Blanchard was one of the earliest English actors who crossed the Atlantic. In his prime, many knew him here; also, his daughter, who was married to the late Tom Hamblin, of Bowery renown. Mr. Blanchard's two sons (when boys, with their father in America) were actors for some time, but quitted the stage for other pursuits. The younger (Edward Lytton) is well known in both hemispheres, as a theatrical and newspaper writer.

We bring our list of old and hereditary theatrical families to a conclusion with the name of Matthews. Charles, the "merrie rogue" of the past generation, was professional by relationship, as well as by inclination. His advent to America will ever be considered as a marked one in our records; his son's, too; both when he came here with Madame Vestris, whom he had recently married, and when, nearly twenty years afterwards he returned again, and wedded the pretty Lizzie Weston Davenport, with whom he is still living.

'ALE, ALL 'ALE, as a Cockney friend once remarked when his side won in an international sporting event; but that is not the sort of ale we are thinking of. Our article is that refreshing beverage which Englishmen and Americans are so fond of and which is now being brewed in this country of the very best quality, foremost among which is Whitney's old stock and pale ales, brewed from the finest Canada malt, at his establishment, Nos. 673 and 675 Washington street, this city. The announcement card of this house may be found in another part of this issue of our paper.

A TRUE JOKE.—A man having been capitally convicted in one of our western cities, was, as usual, asked what he had to say as to why sentence of death should not be passed against him. "Say!" replied he, "why I think the joke has been carried far enough already, and the less that is said about it the better. If you please, your honor, we'll drop the subject."

There is no store in Philadelphia occu-pied by one firm as large as A. T. Stewart's store, Broadway, Tenth street and Fourth avenue. 3. Barnum's Museum, at the corner of Ann street and Broadway, was burned on July 13th, 1865, the fire breaking out at 12.30 o'clock P. M.

J. C. GEMLIN, Ontario.—In answering your query we reply to al of the effect that the National Association does not recognize any championship matches, and therefore no rules are laid down for such games. A club being challenged for the championship of a county or state, or the United States, can accept or refuse as they choose, there being no law but that of courtesy to govern their action in the matter. Custom, however, recognizes that a club, having ac-cepted a challenge for one game, should play the second and third if necessary, or in default acknowledge themselves inferior. Accord-ing to your views, one game decides the championship.

CLIFTON BASE CLUB, Albany, N. Y.—Harry and Jennie Clifford were in the company of the Old Bowery Theatre during the season of 1856-57.

W. H. D., Charleston, Miss.—A. M. Hernandez, during the past week, was at the Howard Athenæum, Boston. He is proba-bly as good a guitar player as there is in the profession.

R. R. ROBINSON, Pittsburgh, Pa.—1. Miss Jean Hosmer is probably at her home in Buffalo, N. Y. 2. The Lawrence Troupe were at Wenon's Opera House, Buffalo, N. Y., in the fall of 1868.

VALLEJO, California.—1. George Boniface has never been married more than once; he and Charley Backus married sisters. 2. They were the Misses Newton.

J. W. G., Jr.—If you desire to go upon the stage you had better call upon the manager of some theatre in person, and state to him your views.

W. J., Chelsea, Mass.—The party refusing to follow suit when trumps were led loses the game. He cannot take advantage of his own wrong doing.

CRAB, L.—"In playing a game of crib with a friend I held 2, 6, 6, 7, and as one turned up, which he cunted 8. My friend says it is only 2. Please decide."..... It counts 8.

J. A. J., Philadelphia.—He is still incarcerated at Lawrence, Mass. A letter addressed in care of Jas. D. Eliot, 26 Eliot street, Boston, will reach him.

J. J. K., Guelph.—The Maple Leaf Club not being in the associa-tion, the Eckford Club, of Syracuse, had the privilege of playing any game they liked in their nine, therefore the bet holds good.

FRIEMAN.—According to the rules in vogue since 1858 the Hay-makers will have to win two games from the Mutuals while the latter are champions in order to win the whip pennant.

INQUIRER, Washington.—A handler has no right to follow up his dog when in the act of scrambling. The rule says, "Both seconds to de-liver the dogs fair from the corner and not leave until the dogs com-mence fighting."

H. H., Detroit.—1. A has no right to claim the first pitch. The player without a mark is nearest to the hub has the right to lead. 2. We cannot understand this query. 3. No work published on the sub-ject.

A. READER OF THE CLIPPER.—Edmund Burke was a distinguished lawyer, statesman and political writer, born in Cork, Ireland. He was a member of parliament, but never prime minister of Eng-land.

PAT.—Samuel, the western pedestrian, is accredited with having walked 30 miles in 9 hours and 51 minutes, or 8 hours and 60 min-utes, excluding stoppages for rest, at the race track, Bloomington, Ill., July 30 inst.

L. D. S., St. Louis.—No game can be forfeited on account of any question between an association club and a non-association club. Changes are not in the National Association. The bat holds good.

WILLIAMSBURGH HALF DOLLAR.—Any club announcing a match, without stating whether it is a regular contest or only a "practice" or "exhibition game," if it proves to be the latter, commits a form of "constructive larceny" upon the public.

SPEAR, Chicago.—E. Mills graduated in the old Newark nine, then retired to the Lyra, afterwards joined the Irvington and then the Mutuals. Eggler graduated in the Eckfords and then joined the Mutuals.

CONSTANT READER, Newark, N. J.—1. To get the parts written ap-ply to M. K. Bernford, No. 17 West 4th street, in this city. 2. A good Irish comic singer and jig dancer can command a salary of from $25 to $50, according to his reputation and popularity.

M. M., Phila.—At cribbage D plays a 9, 5 and 4; total, 18; D then plays an 8 and takes the 15 for a run; plays a 7, and claims 2 for a pair and 2 for the 31. Is he entitled to it?..... No; there is no se-quence, but he is entitled to 2 for 31.

SARATOGA, Cincinnati.—Lady Gertrude Maid never trotted in 2:15 with a running mate. 2. The fastest time was 2:15 made by Ethan Allen and running mate. 3. The time is, or ought to be, always re-corded.

TWENTY TWEEDLE.—1. See our dramatic department. 2. The Cambridge crew won in their annual race with Oxford on the Thames last spring. 3. Heenan was born at West Troy, N. Y. 4. The Sayres is owned by Mr. Dingee.

WILLIAM CORNELL.—For all information in regard to junior clubs, write to Mr. Kelly, of the Junior Association, care of Peck & Say-lor, 139 Nassau street, N. Y.

CAMDEN CITIZEN.—We have no record of India Rubber Ben's time with a running mate. He generally is hitched alongside another trotter in his public performances.

J. H. C., Cincinnati.—1. Kennedy's fastest 4 mile time was 1:36½. 2. We do not know what race was the first Gilpatrick ever rode.

M. R., Sacramento, Cal.—A 4, 5, 6 and 7 of spades, with a 7 of clubs turned up, counts 14, provided it was not the crib, in which case it would only count 12.

FRANK W. S., at Kinsac Depot, N. H.—John C. Heenan, who fought Tom Sayers, was beaten by Tom King, at Wadhurst, Kent, Eng., Feb. 10, 1860.

F. J. C. N., Wheeling, West Va.—It did appear, but was subse-quently contradicted, we believe. Cannot give the name of our in-formant.

SPORTSMEN.—As they did win by six lengths, and more too, the party betting that they would not do so, loses. L's claim is ridicu-lous.

L. R.—Do not know his terms. Bill Clark's sparring school is at 20 West Houston street, up stairs.

CALVIN MILLER, Uniontown, Pa.—Turner & Co., publishers, Philadelphia, advertised a book of the description you want for sale about six months ago.

J. L., Westfield, Mass.—1. Pike's Opera House, Cinn., was burgl on the evening of March 22d, 1856; loss, $1,000 000; insurance, $38,000. 2. "Midsummer Night's Dream."

NED A. M.—The Red Stockings played in N. regular games in 1869. They have lost but three single games out of 150 played in two years. No club record equals this.

SUBSCRIBER, Cincinnati.—We don't know where the words may be had. 2. The riot between the Dead Rabbits and Bowery Boys took place on the 4th of July, 1857.

CLIFTON HOUSE, Albany, N. Y.—Heenan never fought a prize battle until he met Morrissey, since which time he has fought Sayers and King—three in all. He never fought the party you mention, one way or the other.

PUGILIST.—1. Sullivan and Edwards fought at Mystic Island, N. J., March 20, 1848, four rounds, Edwards winning. 2. Ed. Searles, of Philadelphia, is the champion jumper, having cleared 19ft. 9½in., on Union, on the 29th ult.

HERMANN, Watertown.—A handler has no right to follow up his dog when in the act of scrambling. The rule says, "Both seconds to de-liver the dogs fair from the corner and not leave until the dogs com-mence fighting."

a steeplechase of $600, between the following six horses, mile heats, three in five, in harness:—W. B. Harrison's bk g Tapioca; S. Doremus' ch g Buckskin; F. Lowndes' b m Butcher Girl; M. Hewitt's gr m Emily; Mr. Hayman's ch g Timothy, and Mr. Gibson's g g Lumber Boy. Buckskin was at first the favorite, selling for $80 against $100 for the field, but before the race Tapioca came into strong favor, and he sold for $70 against Buckskin's $40, and the field $30. It was evident among the speculators "second thoughts were best," for Tapioca showed his superiority by winning easily in three straight heats. Time, 3:01; 2:54; 3:03.

THE TURF IN INDIANA.—Two equine contests were in order as a wind-up to the fair held at Shoals, Ind., during the week ending Sept. 24th. The first was a trot for $200, best three in five, which was won by Ten Pin John, owned by Jesse Mitchell, of Bedford, the best time being 2:49¼. It was succeeded by a pacing race, for a like amount, which was won by Ole Bull, his best time being 2:33½. The track was very heavy, having been badly cut up; the turns were very irregular and the track is said to be 102 ft. over a mile in length.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A TURFMAN.—We regret to learn the sudden death of Mr. Charles Hummer, the treasurer of the Blood Horse Association, at Nashville, Tenn. He was found dead in his bed on the morning of the 24th ult., the cause being heart disease.

CRICKET.

NEW YORK vs. MANHATTAN.

Never was there a finer day for cricket than the 1st of October proved to be, although the day before the rain poured down in torrents; but the thirsty ground drank it in like a sand bank, and the New York Cricket ground was made in tip top condition by the soaking it had on Friday, and on Saturday the members of the two clubs met in considerable force to have a one day's match on the field, the occasion being their return game together. Play was called at 1 P. M., with the New Yorkers to the bat, Byron and Livesey being in command of the Manhattan batteries. Breinall was the first to return, Byron sending him to the club house for a single; Guelle and Higginson then got in well together, but the former was run out for 6, after which Higham rapidly run up 10—Jackson, who had taken Livesey's end, bowling him for that score. Rogerson then joined Higginson, who had been running up a good score, but "Rog" had only obtained 7 when Byron got in on his stumps and smiled cheerfully as the "pacer" retired. Higginson was shortly afterwards caught by Oakley of Byron for 27—5th wicket for 61—and then Kieller and Eastwood got in together, and before they were parted the score had been run up to 110, of which Eastwood had contributed 18. Before Kieller was disposed of he had placed 25 to his credit, H. Tucker's lobs getting his wicket. The remainder of the eleven did but little, the last wicket falling for 117. Byron took the majority of wickets.

After lunch—far more sensible than your heavy hot dinners—Manhattan went in to the bowling of Rogerson and Eastwood, to the wickets of which the latter rather rapidly until Jackson and Byron got in, the third wicket going down for 11. Jackson had batted finely for 14, and was well in for a good score when he was run out, and Byron had run up 9 in short order, when he returned a hot ball to Eastwood, which was finely held. When these two had left Manhattan's strength gave out, the last wicket falling for 38. As it was rather late, Manhattan did not follow their innings, and so the game was decided by the score of the first innings, which we append:—

WINNISIMMET VS. WALTHAM.—These two clubs, the former belonging to Chelsea and the latter to Waltham, played a one day's match on the grounds of the Boston Club, at East Cambridge, Mass., on the 24th ult. The Chelsea Club were rather weak at the bat, several of their best players not being on hand for the first innings, the scores of which were:—Waltham, 148; Winnisimmet, 72. A second innings was commenced and the Winnisimmets scored 102 runs before they were retired. It being too late to give the Walthams their second innings, the game was decided on the first.

QUOITING.

THE DISC IN THE DOMINION.—A match at quoits was played at Hamilton, C. W., on Sept. 22d., between the Burlington Club, of that place, and the Detroit Club, four rinks a side, which resulted in favor of the former, with 28 to spare. No. 1 rink not out. The Burlingtons played 21 yards distance and the Detroits but 18. Score, 206 to 183. In the evening the victors entertained their visitors with a splendid collation, served up in style by Dan Black, over which a few hours were very agreeably passed.

QUOITING IN JERSEY.—A number of casters of the disc contested for a silver castor and cake basket at Miller's, Jersey City, on the afternoon of Sept. 29th, ten entering for the first and eight for the second. J. Smith, of Paterson, and Ludlow, of West Hoboken, were the successful competitors.

LUDLOW AND KENNEDY have made a home-and-home match at quoits, the first game to take place at the West Hoboken grounds on the 5th inst., and the return at McLaren's grounds, Newark—date not yet decided upon.

C. GRAHAM was beaten by J. Graham in a home-and-home match at quoits, for £20, played at the East India Dockyard, London, on the 12th ult. Score, 81 to 37.

AN INDIGNANT CALEDONIAN.

Concerning the Caledonian convention which sometime ago assembled in this city, one of the sons of Scotia, residing in the New Dominion, who views unfavorably the proceedings thereof, sends us the appended communication, expressive of his indignant feelings:—

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 28, 1870.

EDITOR OF THE CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—On the 31st of Aug. last a convention of Caledonian clubs met in the city of New York, and have laid down certain rules and regulations diametrically opposed to what these clubs were originally intended to promote, and also contrary to all sense and reason. The whole concern, from beginning to end, was a botch-potched affair, and the whole object of the convention seems evidently intended to back up Mr. Donald Dinnie's style, and entirely ignore the styles and methods which have been practiced in Scotland from time immemorial. In regard to putting the stone, we find in these "rules" that the stone must be "putted from the shoulder—not thrown with a swing." We would like to know if there is any individual in this world of woe who has ever heard of a stone that has been "putted" with a swing? The fact of the matter is this, that McLennan's "Toronto swing" seems to have swung their heads upside down. In the running leap we find it adopted that there is to be a "scratch" line and a "foul" line, and here I only add another line to inform the convention that there are ample heels fallen in impleasant places. They go on to say in these rules, that if any one in leaping goes over the "foul" line it will be "foul." What nonsense is here! The common sense rule in this game has been, and ever will be, to measure from toe to heel. In taking a running leap, it is a matter of impossibility for any man to toe the mark. Now, regarding the Highland Fling they seem to have a very confused notion. This dance consists of twenty-four steps, and these "rules" ought to have stated whether ten or twenty of these steps ought to be danced. They seem also equally ignorant regarding the "sword dance," which consists of the introductionary dance round the swords, and then fourteen steps must be danced, crossing and re-crossing without touching the same. In regard to throwing the hammer, it has always been the rule to throw it in any style the competitors may agree upon, but this convention knows of no style but the style of Donald Dinnie, Esq., who cannot come boldly out with a challenge under his own name and surname, but must hound on others to put forth challenges which he well knows no one will accept. We now come to the Rule of Quoits, and find these words:—"Measurement to be from the centre point on the top of the pin to the nearest visible iron." This infatuated rule is worse than the words "scratch" and "foul"—it is contrary to all rule and to all testimony. For example, one quoit may be laying on the top of the ground, farthest away from the pin, another may dip into the invisible ground, and nearest to the pin, yet it has to be measured from the "visible iron," and the much nearest, it is, according to this rule, the farthest away. The proper way, if a quoit dips in the clay, is to remove the clay, and then to measure from pin to quoit. Sir, these gentlemen seem to have all been born wise, and to attempt to learn them wisdom is like throwing water on a duck's back. Instead of calling this convention a "Caledonian Convention," it is a "Donald Dinnie Convention" from beginning to end; but, sir, the time is not far distant when Caledonian Societies will be instituted which will be conducted under the "Rules of Reason," and in strict accordance with the long practised games of Caledonia.

Yours, truly, GLENGARRY.

DEATH OF JOHN ALLEN.—Our readers, in common with the general public, will remember the excitement occasioned about two years ago by the story of "the wicked-pet man in New York," that title being given to John Allen, proprietor of a dance house in Water street, by the sensation moralist, Oliver Dyer. Allen, professing reformation, managed to make a snug sum out of this, suddenly gained prominence, but by degrees the excitement died out, people began to regard the whole thing as a money-making dodge, and after an unsuccessful effort to induce brothers Arnold, of the Howard Mission, and Dyer to join him in a lecturing tour, John, whose former business had been "ruined" by the change, opened a grocery store on the corner of Roosevelt and Batavia streets, where he was doing well, but he drank very heavily, this style of business failing to engage his interest. Sometime since he paid a visit to his father, who resided at West Perth, Fulton county, N. Y. While there he was taken suddenly ill, and became gradually worse until September 18th, when he expired in his father's house and was buried on the 18th. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. W. H. Hawley, pastor of the Baptist Church of Johnstown, and a large number of persons assembled, attracted by the unenviable notoriety deceased had gained in life. Such is the information which we have been furnished with, at all events.

THE RING.

TWO THOUSAND DOLLAR MATCH.—On the 27th of Sept. a match was made at Audenreid, Pa., between Bryan Campbell and David Lewis, the articles for which have been forwarded to us, accompanied by $50 from each man. The match is for $1,000 a side, and the fight is to take place within 200 miles of Mahoney City, on the 19th day of December, neither man to weigh over 140 lbs. on the day of scaling, which is fixed for Dec. 17th, the ceremony to be performed at White Haven, between the hours of 1 and 3 o'clock P. M., when the toss for choice of ground will take place and the referee be chosen. In case of magisterial or other interference, the referee to be empowered to appoint the next time and place of meeting, due notice being given to each man. The decision of the referee to be final. The men are to be in the ring between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock A. M., or the party absent to forfeit the stakes. We have been chosen final stakeholder, but we must decline to act in that capacity, for reasons which we have repeatedly stated; therefore those interested will be under the necessity of choosing some one else. The second deposit, $450 a side, falls due on Oct. 20th, and the third and final, of $400 a side, on Nov. 21st; either party failing to have his money in the hands of the stakeholder on the dates above mentioned to forfeit the amount previously deposited. The match, although between men unknown to the fistic fraternity at large, is for quite a large stake and is viewed with much interest by their friends, who consider them evenly matched and look for a good fight.

JERRY FERN'S ESTIMATOR.—A sine qua non for the especial benefit of the lately arrived big 'un (whom Bill Clark offers to match against any novice in the country), Jerry Fern, came off in the large sparring hall attached to the "Arbour," 50 West Houston street, on the evening of Sept. 30th, and though the weather was not favorable for out-door exercise, a sufficient number of the right sort gathered to fill the apartment, as well as make business lively behind the walnut, where the apple toddies grow. Uncle Tovee was M. C., and speedily started the glovical music with a bout between Young McLaughlin and Clark, preceded by an overture in the shape of a "recitation" by Booth and a comic song by Flynn. Farrell and Madden, Hurley and Pat Hogan, Paddy Winter and Young Edwards, Pat Hogan and Fleming, Jack Hayes and Jerry Fleming, Fern and another and a couple of friends, to fame unknown, kept the auditors in good humor by their display of mitteneology, after which came the wind-up between the beneficiary and a friend, which was a very good set-to indeed, Fern showing himself to be very clever with his dukes and having the best of it all through. Sparring is announced at this hall every Monday and Saturday evening, free, and all who like this sort of thing will find plenty of it worth looking at there.

ALLEN AND GALLAGHER.—The match between Tom Allen and James Gallagher, in which the former put up $1,500 to $800, goes on all O. K. Gallagher was to commence training at George Rinkle's, on the St. Charles rock road, on the 3d inst., with Tom Kelly as mentor. Allen remains at his saloon, attending to business, and will not go into regular training for a couple of weeks yet, when he will establish himself at his old quarters, Wash House, with, probably, Jack Goulding to look after him. He is the favorite at odds of 3 to 1. Gallagher was the recipient of a "testimonial" at Looney's Hall one day last week, several hundred persons being present. The principal set-to was between Gallagher and Kelly. Punch Morris marshalled the forces.

TOM FOX had an exhibition at the Apollo Rooms, 76 Prince street, on Monday evening, Sept. 26th, which was tolerably well attended. The sets-to embraced Bob Lenney and Teddy Miller, Joe Costello and Mike Burns, Harry Judge and Jimmy Lennon, Cock Robin and John Grady (very good), Pete Magill and Monroe, Pat Hogan and Madden, and the wind-up between Billy Donnelly and Tom Fox, which was a fine display. Pat McGowan also sang several Irish songs and Mike Blake appeared. Uncle Tovee was M. C., of course.

"THE CAPITOL."—The capitally appointed hotel, bar and restaurant, located at No. 60 West Twenty-third street, opposite Booth's Theatre, and bearing the above capital title, will be formally opened by the proprietors, James Mace, the retired champion of the world, and Phil. H. Hargrave, on Saturday, Oct. 8th, when they invite their friends and the public at large to give them a call, promising to use their best endeavors to render their visit pleasant.

CLEAVER AND CARELESS' MAN.—A match was made on the 1st inst. between Bill Cleaver and the man whom Joe Careless, of Paterson, offered to back against him, to play a fair game of Skittles, 21 chalks up, said to be for fifty dollars a side, the contest to take place at Cleaver's alley, 334 Eighth avenue, near 27th street, on Tuesday evening, 4th inst. Both being fine players an exciting game is expected.

BILLY MCLEAN writes to us, saying that the statement sent to us by Jack Goulding, to the effect that he was at Keokuk, Iowa, is incorrect, as he is keeping a place in West Philadelphia and has not been away from Quakerdom for a year past. He also belongs to the West Philadelphia base ball club.

JEM HERBERT, the well known British light-weight, died on Sept. 11th in London. He fought thrice in the ring, defeating Harry Adams and being vanquished by the two best light-weights of the day, viz., the then champion, Joe Hodges (Spider), and Jem Trainer, of Liverpool.

NOTHING was accomplished at the meeting held on the 27th ult. for the purpose of arranging another match for the light-weight championship, though Collyer was very anxious for it. He left for Baltimore the same evening, both a sadder and a wiser man.

DAN BRODERICK has been tendered a benefit, which will take place at the Arbour, 50 West Houston street, on Saturday evening, 8th inst. In addition to boxing matches between other good 'uns, there will be a scientific bout between Bill Clark and Joe Coburn for the wind up.

CHRISTOPHER PIDGEON, a well known sporting man and extensive liquor dealer of the metropolis, died on Sept. 26th, aged 37. His funeral took place on the 2d inst. and was largely attended.

A MILL is said to have taken place at Cockspur Island, Ga., recently, between two young fellows named Adams and Hurley, which was declared a draw after fighting 17 rounds in 22 minutes.

DAN ELDRED AND AN UNKNOWN fought near Chicago on the 17th ult., for $200 a side, the former winning in 7 rounds, occupying 22 minutes.

JACK CURLEY, who fought Jim Gallagher, near New Orleans, gave an exhibition at St. Joseph, Mo., recently. The wind-up was given by Curley and Johnny Lafferty.

CRUMPY AND MILES, a couple of novices, fought near London for £10, on Sept. 19th, the former winning in 28 rounds, 57 minutes.

WE HAVE LETTERS for John C. Heenan, Tom Allen and Sam Collyer.

A ROWING MATCH between the four-oared shell Lady Evelyn, of Milwaukee, and the six oar shell Lady Fairchild, of Madison, came off at Madison, Wis., Sept. 21st. The winning club to receive a silver cup. The distance pulled was two miles, which was made by the Lady Evelyn in fifteen minutes and thirty-five seconds, beating the Lady Fairchild five seconds, and winning the cup. The race was witnessed by a large concourse of people.

THE MATTHEW J. COGGEY GUARD go on their third annual target excursion, on the 10th inst., to Hamilton Park. They give a ball in the evening at the National Assembly Rooms.

SUMMER FRIENDS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Good bye, my summer friends, good bye!
Your stay was sweet but very short;
But I can't really mourn for you
So deeply as perhaps I ought;
As long as Fortune on me smiled,
Sweet were the songs you used to weave;
But when the fickle goddess frowned,
How quickly then you take your leave!

Good bye, my summer friends, good bye!
We do not live and toil in vain;
Perhaps that Fortune may relent,
And change her frown to smiles again;
Till then to live without your love
And hope for brighter days I'll try,
And for the present cheerly sing—
Good bye, my summer friends, good bye!

HOW A HUSBAND TOILED AT HOME,

WHILE HIS FAMILY SPENT THE SUMMER IN N. YORK.

A short time ago, a case was tried before Esquire Gilliphen, at Mount Auburn, N. Y., which affected the moral character of a gentleman well known in that locality. The defendant was Mr. John W. Sewell, a resident of Mount Auburn. The prosecuting witness was a young woman named Alrooda S. Clark, who has, for some time past, borne the relation of concubine to Mr. Sewell. He abandoned her a few weeks ago, and, as a matter of spite work, the young woman was induced to enter a criminal suit against him, charging him with the aforesaid crime in her own affidavit. Mr. Sewell claimed that it was a case of wretched blackmailing. The affidavit sets forth that the said John W. Sewell, on or about the 1st of July, 1870, and up to and including the 15th of August, did live with, cohabit, and notoriously keep and live in a state of adultery with the affiant, the said Miss Alrooda S. Clark. Miss Clark testified that she had known Mr. Sewell six years. On the 25th of last June he rented a room, No. 61 Court street, where he visited her nearly every night. They occupied the same room, and their relations were of an improper nature. She then testified to the various times that she had been criminally intimate with the accused. There were other persons living in the house. She vacated her rooms on Sept. 1st, and Mr. Sewell left two or three weeks before, and had hunted her several times since. He left her because she wouldn't tell him where she was one day. He did not leave her because she was committing adultery with another man at that time. She came from Brighton to the rooms on Court street at the instance of Mr. Sewell, and he paid the rent. When she left there she went in the company of a man named Henry White. Mr. Sewell came to her rooms one morning before breakfast and hauled all the things away. He left a notice pinned to the mantel board, which the witness here produced and identified as Mr. Sewell's handwriting, because she had received numerous letters from him during the past five years. Mr. Sewell, accompanied by a policeman, had come to her room that morning, on Sycamore street, before daylight, and compelled her to give up all his letters and a gold watch and chain and a deed belonging to her. The letter told her to meet him further had contributed to be true to his wife and advised her to try to live a virtuous life. The defence called a landlady named Kingie, on Sycamore street, between Third and Fourth, to prove that Miss Clark was living at this time in her house with a man named Henry White, a fiddler at Collins' Barracks. Mr. Charles Clark testified that Sewell boarded with him and had been boarding with him since his family went to New York, where they go every summer. He had known him to be absent in Kentucky, at Coleman's and New York during the past two months. Examined the letter mentioned above and gave it as his opinion that it was not Sewell's handwriting. Mr. Albert Baker, who is in Mr. Sewell's employ on Mount Auburn, testified that Mr. Sewell slept at his own house. He knew his writing and didn't think that the letter was his. He never heard of anything derogatory to his character. This embraced the testimony. Messrs. Jessup and McCarty, who were manipulating the case for and against, testified to some after this to making the justice of their side of the case plain, after which the nine heads of the court were put together and Mr. McCarty's views were concurred in. Mr. Sewell was discharged without further ceremony.

KISSING IN THE DARK.

The New Orleans Picayune has the following interesting account of how it was did, and what came of it:—"In the romantic estimation of lovers there is nothing so delightful as kissing in the dark. It seems to possess all the charms which imagination, enhanced by reality, can produce. But mistakes will sometimes happen. Occasionally the hurry and excitement of the interview does not permit that deliberate judgment essential to certainty. It so happened with Orville Davis a few nights since. Orville is a youth of some nineteen summers, and being a native of those fierce climes 'where the cypress and myrtle are emblems of deeds that are done in the land,' his passions are necessarily intense and his affections profound. He loves a little sewing girl residing in the family of a Gascon. This gentleman is inclined to be jealous. He doesn't put the most charitable construction on everything he sees, and hence Orville is very careful about his visits to the house. But passing by there the night in question he found the hall door open, and saw dimly defined in the moonlight a female sitting on the steps. Orville thought it was his dulcinea. Without a moment's hesitation Orville gave her a chaste salute. His lips clung to hers, thrillingly, lovingly. It may have been the sweetness of it—it may have been an overpowering sense of luxury—it may have been surprise—but the lady screamed. This startled Orville. He looked searchingly into the lady's face, and then awoke to the horror of his mistake. It wasn't the little sewing girl, but the Gascon's wife. And just then, as still further completing the matter, the Gascon rushed out of the house, demanding 'what all this meant.' Orville couldn't explain, but the lady did. The Gascon made a rush at him, and Orville fled, screaming at every jump, 'Murder! help! fire!' In his rapid flight he gave but little attention to obstructions in his path, and finally, striking his foot against a stone, tumbled to the ground. It was a trying moment. The Gascon was at his heels, armed with knife and bent on mischief. The result might have been sanguinary, but just at that moment Capt. Schreiber, of the First Police Precinct, happened to pass, and interposed to prevent a homicide. Both parties were taken into custody, and when arraigned before the Recorder, explained that the circumstance arose from a case of kissing in the dark."

BEWARE OF ELECTION EXCITEMENTS.

Mistakes will occur in the best regulated families. Especially when excited, or under the control of passion, is one liable to misjudge, and, misjudging, almost certain to err. At all events, such has been the experience of a youthful Benedict in New Orleans who has just entered upon domestic life. He has borne heroically the increased expenditures which laces, corsets, silks and other adjuncts of the female toilet have produced; indeed, he has ventured to encounter the fierce rivalry of the modiste, and, great happiness and smilingly look serenely to the future. But even in this moment of his greatest fondness a change came over the spirit of his dreams. A "we sma" voice piped cunning infantile coings from the cradle and "the subject of this sketch," as the novelists say, rejoiced in the conscious possession of a baby. But the baby has a freakery, tallowy complexion, and every day it grew darker and the bald head began to sport black hair. A physician was called in to note these peculiarities and give a diagnosis of the case.

"Doctor," inquired the father, "is there anything peculiar about it?"

"Yes. It is threatened with the croup."

"Oh! is that all?"

"I think that is quite enough," replied the physician.

"Yes, I dare say; but do you know, doctor, when the little fellow began to turn black, and considering there has been so much election excitement around here lately, I began to think he was threatened with a nigger."

Perhaps there wasn't a little trouble in that family, and perhaps there was.

A YOUNG MAN WOULD A WOOING GO.—On the evening of the 18th ult. some little excitement was created on Elm street, near Eighth, Cincinnati, O., by a couple of young folks—a girl of apparently sixteen or seventeen years, and a young man only a few years her senior—both well dressed and on terms of perfect confidence, who were slowly walking north, evidently destined for one of the lovers' walks of Washington Park, when they were overtaken by a middle aged man, who walked hurriedly and excitedly from Seventh street to Eighth, and then ran up to them, when he distinguished them plainly in the light of a street lamp. As he reached them the girl screamed and the young man took to his heels. The pursuer merely said to the girl:—"Daughter, you wait here," and then made a vigorous break after the young man, whom he succeeded in overtaking at the canal bridge. Two or three persons who saw the capture state that the middle aged man, who had the appearance of being a respectable mechanic, didn't waste many words on the "d—d young squirt," as he called the youngster. He merely remarked:—"I'll teach you not to run my daughter to the devil," and he proceeded to thrash him soundly with a stout rattan cane over the face and head and hands and legs. Having finished this job neatly, the young man being completely powerless in his strong grasp, the father kicked him vigorously and returned to his daughter. The latter had waited for him according to orders. When he came up she seized his arm and walked off, with downcast face and a closed mouth.

ANOTHER CASE OF "WOMAN'S RIGHTS."—John McGairy and his wife have occupied rooms at the Province House, No. 1 Province court, East Boston, Mass., for some time past. When John returned home on the evening of the 20th of Sept., he found his wife in flagrante delictu with another man named James Donnelly, who is a waiter at the Parker House and roomed at the Province House. It is alleged that Donnelly, who had been continually drinking for some weeks, had previously entered the room of Mrs. McGairy, sometimes in a nude state, even while the husband was present, but, as he had never met the same thing in the apartments of the proprietor of the house, and in those of a colored servant girl, Mr. McGairy apprehended no such serious consequences to his well being by these visitations. On the above date, however, a little boy of Mr. McGairy's says his mother sent for Donnelly, and asked him to drink a drink of whiskey: that he promptly complied with her wishes, supplementing this bounty by giving the boy a cent and telling him to go out and play. When Mr. McGairy discovered his wife's infidelity his first thought was to punish the guilty pair in such a manner as would prevent a repetition of their conduct, but on second thoughts he resolved to lock them in the room together and secure witnesses to their criminality. In attempting to do this he attracted their attention, and Donnelly, in trying to rise from the bed, received a violent kick in the mouth from the enraged husband, after which he fled and has not since been seen. Sergeant Foster, of Station Two, arrested the woman.

A SECOND SOLOMON COME TO JUDGE.—Quite an interesting case of embezzlement occupied the attention of the recorder of the First District Court, in New Orleans, on the morning of the 17th ult. It appeared to arise from the disputed ownership of a chemisette. Two females claimed it. It was in testimony that it was all they had and the determination of the case was a matter of vital importance to both. Two attorneys were engaged on both sides, and during the trial of the case were earnestly engaged in examining the novel article, which was carefully held up by two attending officers. The lawyers were bachelors and had never seen anything like it. The case was adjusted by the court decreeing that the lawyers should buy a second chemisette and present it to one of the parties. This settled the matter.

THE SOCIAL EVIL.—A new phase of this somewhat tedious question was developed in Cincinnati, O., on the 24th ult., in the case of the State of Ohio vs. A. C. Crofton, indicted for permitting a house to be used as a house of prostitution. An elaborate argument was made by defendant's counsel, who said that the prisoner had let the house for a year at $50 per month rental; the lessee had made it into a bandy house without his consent, and that the state could not expect him to go to work and eject his tenant for any such cause, but that it was the state's duty to do so. This the jury did not see, and the prisoner was found guilty, and sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse. The defendant, however, appealed to the Supreme Court of the state of Ohio, and was released on a $300 bond to await the decision of that court.

INFAMOUS DISCLOSURES IN ENGLAND.

GROSS IMMORALITY.

On Sept. 13th, at the Marylebone Police Court, London, Eng., an Italian named Charles Viensor Grossi, about 40 years of age, merchant, was charged with assaulting his wife, Emma Grossi, on the 5th of Sept. Council having opened the case, called Emma Grossi, who said she married the prisoner on the 4th of February, 1869. She had then just turned seventeen years of age. When they married she had only known him three days. (Sensation). Her father was not aware that she was living under the protection of a gentleman. Prisoner was aware that she had lived under the protection of a gentleman, and he wanted her to go and live with him again after they were married. She told him she could not, that he had married her, and if he treated her in a proper manner she would be a good, honest wife to him. After they were married in Marylebone Church, they went home and resided with her parents. At the time he led them to believe that he had ostensible means of subsistence. He said he had money remitted from his country. She was not aware of her own knowledge of his having any means of his own. He said to her one day:—"Are you going to see that gentleman?" She said she was not, and he said she must go and see him (the Turkish gentleman). He meant Aga Effendi. She did go and sleep with him and the prisoner slept at home. (Great sensation). This was done with his sanction and knowledge. He received the money and paid her mother her week's rent. This was the money she received from the gentleman. This went on for a month after their marriage. She then took apartments at a doctor's shop in Princes street, Leicester square. At that time she did not sleep with her husband. The gentleman (Aga Effendi) used to visit her. On one occasion the prisoner went to the house and saw the Effendi and went on his knees and fawned about him and kissed his hand and asked for a loan of £5 to get his clothes out of pledge. He received the £5. She went to Paris with the Effendi. Her husband got the cab and placed the boxes on the roof. He entered the cab with her and went to the station and there bade her farewell. The assault she complained of was committed at the house in Hadley street. Prisoner asked her for money. She said she had none, and Mrs. Massetti, her landlady, told him to take her and provide for her in a proper manner. He said he would drag her out. She told him to say what he had to say in the presence of witnesses. He said he wanted £6,000 and she must get it for him. At first he said he wanted either £5,000 or £6,000. He said he would have it, and if she did not get it for him he would cut her throat. He then seized her by the throat. He had a tight hold of her and hurt her very severely. Two policemen came up and he made off. Cross-examined.—Her father did not know of her marrying prisoner. Herself and Grossi went to Doctors' Commons. A gentleman there wrote something down and it was read to them. She went home to her father's after the marriage. She found afterwards that her husband had no means of subsistence. A letter was read purporting to come from a solicitor, threatening prisoner with proceedings for the assault, and also if he did not keep away from the house. After some further evidence as to the assault, prosecutrix was recalled and said that whilst they lived a few days in Rupert street an agreement was drawn up between them that she should live with the Effendi for six months, for £500, and that the prisoner should receive the money. The magistrate ordered prisoner to find two sureties in £25 each and himself in £50, to keep the peace for the next twelve months.

HOW A DISSATISFIED WIFE WAS TAKEN IN.—The wife of a farmer residing near Buffalo recently became so much enamored of a cow doctor, who went to attend on her husband's cattle, that she proposed to elope with him to a distant state. He informed the husband about the matter, and, much to his surprise, the latter told him to gratify her little whim. It was then arranged that he should meet her on the outskirts of the farm on Monday last; in the meantime the husband persuaded him to exchange clothes, and when the time arrived for the elopement he (the husband) was promptly on hand. In the darkness the mistake was not noticed, and the couple "broke" was not discovered until their arrival at one of the Buffalo hotels. The cow doctor was on hand with his own wife, and between the four of them they managed to do justice to an excellent supper, and make away with several bottles of wine.

AN AMOROUS SHOEMAKER—A CURE FOR LOVE.—On the afternoon of the 14th ult. a shoemaker, living over the Rhine, in the vicinity of Liberty street, Cincinnati, Ohio, enticed a little girl about twelve years of age into the cellar of his house, and attempted to violate her person. Her screams quickly brought the neighbors to her assistance, who seized the monster, with the view of turning him over to the police. His wife, however, preferred to take the matter in her own hands. So she organized a whipping bee, and called all her friends together to have a grand time. When the spectators were all assembled, she strapped down her amorous and unfaithful lord, and gave him such a beating that his screams could be distinctly heard for seventeen or eighteen squares in every direction. The ardor of the Teuton was so effectually cooled that he is not likely to wander from the paths of virtue again for many years.

THE TRIGGER.

PIGEON SHOOTING.

MATCH FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP GOLD BADGE AND ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, BETWEEN IRA PAINE AND MILES JOHNSON—PAINE THE VICTOR BY EIGHT BIRDS.

The long looked for and once postponed match between Ira Paine, of New York, and Miles Johnson, of New Jersey, for the pigeon shooting championship of America, the emblematic champion gold badge presented by the Sportsman's Club, of Providence, R. I., and $1,000, came off at Fleetwood Park, on Wednesday, the 28th ult. It had been originally fixed for the 17th ult., at the same place, but postponed on account of unfavorable weather to the above day. The championship and badge were won by Miles Johnson on the first occasion they were shot for, which was at Providence, R. I., on the 7th of April last, beating such crack shots as John Taylor, of Jersey City; J. B. Brown, of Buffalo; E. W. Tinker and Percy Aldrich, of Providence, and his present opponent, Ira Paine, of New York. On that occasion they shot at 35 birds each, Johnson killing 32, Taylor and Tinker 30 each, Paine 28, and Brown and Aldrich 27 birds each. The badge itself, which was the gift of the Providence Sportsman's Club, is a beautiful work of art, consisting of a solid gold tablet, attached to which is a gold chain of exquisite workmanship, bearing a gold star containing thirty-one diamonds, which is surmounted by the American eagle in solid gold. The conditions which govern the championship and badge are as follows:—

We, the undersigned contestants for the badge of championship of America, given by the Rhode Island Sportsman's Club, do hereby pledge ourselves and agree to the following rules and regulations whenever and wherever the said badge is contested for:

1. The winner of the badge shall give a satisfactory guarantee to the officers of the Rhode Island Sportsman's Club for the safety thereof, in the shape of a reasonable security.

2. The winner shall not be obliged to shoot any challenger, for a sum not less than $500 a side, within four months of the date of said challenge, under penalty of forfeiting the badge.

3. Any party challenging the holder of this badge shall make a deposit of $250 as a forfeit to shoot for said badge, in the hands of an appointed stakeholder, to be covered by the challenged party with an equal amount. The balance of the money, $250 a side, shall be deposited in the stakeholder's hands three days before the match is shot, said match then becoming a play or pay, and if the holder not complying with the foregoing conditions he shall forfeit the badge to the party challenging.

4. Every contestant for this badge shall pledge himself to contend for the same under the rules of the Rhode Island Sportsman's Club governing pigeon shooting.

5. All matches for this badge shall be at one hundred single birds each, 21 and 7 ground traps.

6. In all matches in which this badge is contested for the referee shall be an officer in the Rhode Island Sportsman's Club, or a party approved by them.

7. The holder of the badge shall name the place where the same shall be contested for, which shall also be satisfactory to the referee.

8. Each contestant in any match for this badge shall provide not less than one hundred and ten birds for the match, and the birds shall be taken out of one contestant's basket or box till the same is exhausted, and the other contestant's basket or box shall be used out of until that is exhausted, and so on alternately during the match.

9. Having tossed up for the first shot and trap, the second party shooting shall take the bird in the remaining trap, and so on through the match.

10. The party holding this badge for two years against all contestants, it shall become his personal property.

Immediately after Miles Johnson became the possessor of the badge, he was challenged by Ira Paine to shoot according to the above conditions. As Johnson had four months time to shoot in he did not accept the offer until that period was nearly expired, when both parties deposited their forfeit of $250 each and the necessary arrangements were made.

The day was highly favorable, but, although the hour for shooting was announced at 2 o'clock P. M., it was nearly 3 o'clock before they commenced, thus prolonging the match into dark and causing much dissatisfaction. It is not a little singular, but in pigeon shooting matches, especially where Paine is concerned, there is always great want of punctuality observed. After the last possible chance of obtaining a dollar gate money had passed, the competitors proceeded to business. Mr. Robert Robinson, of Brooklyn, an old and esteemed knight of the trigger, was selected referee; Mr. Charles Bangs was Paine's umpire and Mr. John Ryan acted in a sim lar capacity for Johnson. There was a large attendance present, and betting was heavy. Before commencing Johnson had the call of $50 to $40, but after they had shot at 10 birds each, when Paine was 2 ahead, it changed to $100 to $40 on Paine. They had to shoot at 21 single traps, 30 yds. rise and 80 yds. boundary, and the betting was lively as to which would kill most birds on the first and second fifty respectively, Paine being the favorite on both events. Paine, as stated, was two birds ahead on the first ten and six on the second ten, he having killed 18 to Johnson's 12. When each had shot at 50 birds the score stood, Paine, 43; Johnson, 34, the latter nine birds behind. After 70 birds had been shot on each side it began to grow dark, and Johnson wished to postpone the match, but was compelled to continue, for Paine refused to agree to a postponement. On the last 30 birds Johnson out-shot Paine by one bird, he killing 42 to Paine's 41. Paine won the match by eight birds, killing 84 to his opponent's 76. We give the score:

Paine—1111111111

Fall Meeting at Mystic Park.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, SEPT. 27TH.

The fall meeting at the Mystic Park Trotting Course, Medford, Mass., was inaugurated on the 27th ult. The first trot was for horses that had never beaten 2:40, and had closed with twenty-four nominations, of which only eight came to the post. Very little money was bet on the fancy race, but what little there was made Dugrey's b m Fanny Lambert the favorite. After the first heat, which was won by the g m Belle of Toronto, she became the favorite, as it was very evident she could out-foot all her competitors, which she succeeded in doing, taking the next two heats and the race, of which the following is the summary:—

MYSTIC PARK.—FALL MEETING, Tuesday, Sept. 27th.—Purse $500; $300 to first, $150 to second and $50 to third, for horses that had never trotted better than 2:40; mile heats, best 3 in 5, in harness.

The second race was for the 2:29 class, and drew a field of eight starters out of the twelve entries made. At 2.30 P. M. they appeared promptly on the track and drew positions as follows:—Shepard Knapp, the pole; McClellan, second; Medoc, third; Col. Russell, fourth; Lady Augusta, fifth; Mary, sixth; N. B. Palmer, seventh, and Prince on the outside. The pool purchasers went quite heavy on the b g Col. Russell, he selling in a $275 pool for $100; the b m Mary, for $80; the s g Prince, for $40; the wh g Medoc, $35, and the field $20. The race was splendidly contested, every heat being gallantly fought for by the favorites, the first being taken by Mary; Col. Russell taking the next three in fine style, and doing the fourth in 2:33½. He was driven by Budd Doble, who took his father's place on account of a sprained wrist received in the first heat. Appended is the summary:—

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 28TH.

On Wednesday, the 28th ult., the attendance was larger than that of the first day, including a large number of New Yorkers, who expressed themselves as delighted with the sport and the arrangements for it, particularly so after the result of this day's trotting, when out of the four races trotted during the meeting New York had carried off three of them.

The first race was for a purse of $1,000, for horses that had never beaten 3 minutes, and for which there were twelve entries, only eight of which made their appearance. They were:—Gipsy, of Boston; Daylight, of Boston; Ferry Henshaw, of Lebanon, N. H.; Lady Hughes, of Flushing, L. I.; Lady Alice, of Boston; Andy Johnson, of Boston; Shawmut, of Boston; Contraband, of New York. In the betting, before the race, Contraband was a hot favorite. Just before the start for the fifth heat, however, Andy Johnson took first place in the pools. The race was closely contested, Johnson taking the first heat, with Contraband second, a very close affair. Contraband then took the second and third, with Gipsy well up for second place in the former and Johnson only a length behind for second place in the third heat. The fourth Johnson took the lead at the word go, retaining it all through the heat, with Gipsy second, Lady Hughes third and the Contraband fourth. The fifth heat was a close contest between Contraband, Johnson and Lady Hughes, the former laying back until the half mile pole was reached, when he was let out, taking the heat and race in style, with the Lady second and Andy third. Summary:—

MYSTIC PARK, BOSTON, Sept. 28th.—Purse $500; $300 to first horse, $150 to second, $50 to third; mile heats, 3 in five, in harness, to horses that had never beaten 2:30.

The second race was for horses that had never beaten 2:32, which had closed with some twelve entries, seven of which appeared on the track as contestants, namely, the New Berlin Girl, Lydia Thompson, St. Elmo, Royal John, Col. Lakeman, Sallie and Prince Arthur. In the betting before the start Royal John was decidedly the favorite and won both the first and second heats, the first after a close and exciting struggle with the Berlin Girl. The third was the best contested heat of the day, the b m Sallie, who had done nothing during the race, made play at the start for the lead, John racing with her to the quarter which she did in 38 sec.; going up the backstretch to the half she left him, doing the half in 1:15¾, when she died out, and John went to the front and took the lead at the three-quarter pole, with Berlin Girl and Lydia racing for second place. As they entered the home-stretch Lydia shook off the Girl and went for Royal John, a sharp brush followed and they were head and head all the way up the stretch, but just before passing under the wire Lydia got her head in front and the judges gave her the heat, the time being 2:31¾. This somewhat alarmed the backers of John and hedging became the order of the day. At the start for the fourth heat Lydia Thompson took the lead but died out before reaching the quarter, and John and the Berlin Girl began racing in right good earnest, but the gelding was too much for the mare and he soon gave her the good bye, winning the heat and race easily, Lydia getting second money and St. Elmo third. Summary:—

H. F. Whitemore's, of Fitchburg, s m Lady Barrett	7		dr

Time, 2:58; 2:56; 2:55; 2:57.

The second race was for double teams, best two in three, to harness, which was won by Dan and mate, entered by L. Carney, of Fitchburg, in two straight heats in 3:17 and 3:10.

TROTTING AT HILLSBOROUGH, N. H.—At the Contoocook Agricultural Fair held at Hillsborough, N. H., on the 28th ult., there was an unusually fine trot for a purse of $175, open to all horses, for which there were two entries, Jerry Locke and Nellie Morrison, who trotted six heats, two of which were dead heats, before the race could be decided, while the time in each of them was well down in the forties. The first was a dead heat in 2:45; the second, won by Jerry, in 2:44; the third, by Nellie, in 2:43½; the fourth, a dead heat in 2:44; the fifth and sixth were won by Jerry, in 2:43 and 2:46¾. Previous to which, there was a trot between several three minute horses for a purse of $30, three in five, the third, fourth and fifth heats being won by G. P. Cheever's g Sam, in 3:04, 3:02 and 2:58, the first heat having been taken by Capt. Robbins' b m Beauty, in 2:50, and the second by G. H. Ellinwood's b h Dick, in 3:04.

A $200 MATCH AT MYSTIC PARK, MASS.—On the 26th ult. a match for $200 was trotted between the b g Everett Boy and the s m Fanny; the former was the favorite and won the race in three straight heats. The following is a summary:—

MYSTIC PARK, Monday, Sept. 26th.—Match $200; mile heats, best 3 in 5, to wagons.

J. Frassenden's blk g Everett Boy	1	1	1
D. Keay's s m Fanny	2	2	2

Time, 2:42¾; 2:43¾; 2:44¾.

A COWARDLY ACT.—On the evening of the 24th ult. some coward attempted to set fire to the stables at Crosby and Capen's Hotel, at the Hartford, Conn., Trotting Park, by dropping a lighted match in the box stall where the horse Honest Allen was kept, but the fire was discovered early and extinguished. There were many valuable animals in the stables and the loss would have been great but for the early discovery of the fire.

The Doncaster Meeting.

THE RACES FOR THE GREAT YORKSHIRE, CHAMPAGNE AND ST. LEGER STAKES, AND DONCASTER CUP.

The great race meeting at Doncaster, Eng., was held during the week ending Sept. 17th, as already announced by the cable, and being favored with propitious weather, was as successful as any held during preceding years. We herewith present details of the more important events, decided respectively on the 13th, 14th and 16th ult.:—

THE GREAT YORKSHIRE HANDICAP of 25 sovs. each, 15ft., and 5 only if declared, with 300 added; winners extra; the second received 50 sovs. out of the stakes, and the third saved his stake. St. Leger Course, 60 subs., 44 of whom declared.

Sir C. Legard's ch c Border Knight, by Adventurer—

Miriam, 4 yrs, 8st 10lbs	Cusiance 1
Lord Zetland's br h Geant des Batailles, 5 yrs, 9st (car 8st 11lb)	J. Snowden 2
Mr. Johnstone's bl c Good Hope, 4 yrs. 8st	Hudson 3

Six others started. Betting.—300 to 30 agst. Geant des Batailles, 6 to 1 each agst. Viscount, Clemence and Recorder, 5 to 1 agst. Mr. Johnstone's pair, 8 to 1 agst Paganini, and 10 to 1 each agst. Good Hope and Border Knight. Without any delay the signal was given, Recorder, for a few strides, having a slight lead, but when they had fairly settled down to their work Geant des Batailles went to the front, making play at a moderate pace, followed by Recorder and Clemence, Mr. Johnstone's pair being next. The Bobby and Viscount tring well up with them, the two last being Paganini and Border Knight. After going about three hundred yards Recorder dropped back into fifth place, the relative positions of the others being unaltered until they emerged from behind the hill, when the pace was materially increased, and the field of horses became much more scattered, Paganini and Border Knight still, however, whipping in. On passing the rifle butts The Bobby ran into second place, and after waiting on Geant des Batailles to the Red House, he there took up the running, Clemence rapidly giving way. After The Bobby had assumed the command, Geant des Batailles was passed by Good Hope and Exciseman, and as they came above the slight descent to the Grand Paganini and Border Knight greatly improved their positions, soon taking their place with the leading division. As they came round the bend into the straight, however, all but Clemence took such close order that a sheet could have covered the lot, The Bobby being the first to give way, and in a few strides further Viscount, after looking very formidable, was beaten. Paganini, on the extreme right of his horses, then appeared to have the best of the race, but he compounded under the weight before reaching the distance, and Mr. Johnstone's pair and Border Knight had the issue between them. Opposite the commencement of the stand inclosure, however, Border Knight came out, and, without an apparent effort, increased his lead, and won in a common canter by half a dozen lengths. Geant des Batailles, ridden out, passed Paganini, whom French ceased when perseverence was useless, and defeated Good Hope by half a length for the second money. Exciseman, close up with the pair, was fourth, Paganini being fifth, Clemence sixth, Viscount seventh, The Bobby eighth and Recorder next. The three last, however, pulled up on the post. Net value of the stakes, £630.

THE CHAMPAGNE STAKES of 50 sovs each, h ft, for two year olds; colts 8st 10lbs., fillies 8st 5lbs.; the second saved his stake. Red House in. 43 subs.

Mr. Merry's b c King of the Forest, by Scottish Chief—

Lioness, 8st 10lbs	J. Snowden 1
Mr. Savile's b c Ripponden, 8st 10lbs	Maidment 2
Lord Anglesey's b f Laetitia, 8st 5lbs	Cannon 3
W. Graham's b c Marquis of Steyne, 8st 10lbs	Fordham 4
Lord Rosebery's b c Ellesmere, 8st 10lbs	T. Chaloner 5

Betting.—5 to 4 on King of the Forest, 100 to 30 agst. Ripponden and 10 to 1 agst any other offered. The five competitors were started on very even terms, the favorite being the first to show in advance, with a slight lead of Ripponden on the whip hand, Laetitia and Ellesmere lying on the left, Marquis of Steyne, on the extreme right, being last. At a rattling pace they ran thus to the distance, where Ellesmere was beaten, dropping away to the rear. The issue from this point appeared to rest with the two favorites, as Laetitia gave way, but she raised the hopes of the fielders by challenging resolutely opposite the stand. The effort, however, was not sustained, and she dropped away, leaving King of the Forest and Ripponden to fight out an exciting struggle. Within twenty strides of home Ripponden appeared to have the best of it, but King of the Forest, answering Snowden's resolute call with remarkable gameness, won a splendid race by a head. Laetitia finished two lengths in rear of Mr. Savile's colt, Marquis of Steyne being a bad fourth and Ellesmere last.

THE ST. LEGER STAKES of 25 sovs. each, for three year olds; colts, 8st. 10lbs.; fillies, 8st. 5lbs.; the second received 200 sovs. and the third 100 sovs. out of the stakes. St. Leger Course (1 mile, 6 furlongs, 132 yards). 234 subs.

T. V. Morgan's b c Hawthornden, by Lord Clifden—

Bonny Blink	Grimshaw 1
Lord Falmouth's b c Kingcraft	French 2
Lord Falmouth's br f Wheat-ear	F. Webb 3

There were sixteen other starters. Betting.—2 to 1 agst Kingcraft, 7 to 2 agst Palmerston, 8 to 1 agst Sunlight, 10 to 1 agst Wheat-ear, 100 to 8 agst Captivator, 25 to 1 agst Tabernacle, 25 to 1 agst Stanley and 1,000 to 35 agst Hawthornden, 40 to 1 agst Normanby, 50 to 1 agst Bonny Swell, 66 to 1 agst The Boy and 1,000 to 10 agst Ptarmigan. The signal was given to a very fair start, the commencement of the struggle being announced by a tremendous roar of satisfaction from the spectators. Sunlight was best away, and, with his head in his chest, went tearing away in the centre of the course, just clear of Wild Flower, Palmerston, Stockhausen, Hawthornden, and Kingcraft at the head of the others, who were almost in a line, but, after going about two hundred yards, Mr. Merry's colt was seen to suddenly swerve to the right, and, just clearing out of the advancing horses, who flashed past him in a moment, he was stopped, having as it afterwards transpired, broken the fetlock joint of his near hind leg. This disaster left Wild Flower on the right and Stockhausen in the centre, with a clear lead of Palmerston, Hawthornden, Captivator, Wheat-ear and Recorder on the left, Normanby, Ely Appleton, Bonny Swell, Alarie, Enterprise and Tabernacle on the right, the two last being Stanley and Physiology. The pace, which had been very good, was rather increased than diminished by Ely Appleton and Ptarmigan drawing clear of the ruck and closely pursuing Stockhausen and Wild Flower, who were doing their best to maintain the speed. Following the leading quartet were now Normanby, Alarie, Enterprise, Wheat-ear, The Boy, Recorder, and Tabernacle, Palmerston and Captivator lying well up to them, while Kingcraft and Hawthornden were observed to have dropped away to the tail of the ruck, with Bonny Swell, Stanley and Physiology still whipping in. Behind the hill both Ely Appleton and Ptarmigan passed Wild Flower and Stockhausen, who were now hopelessly beaten, having performed their mission, to make the running for Palmerston and Captivator, to the best of their ability. The pace, as they descended the incline towards the Rifle Butts, became very hot, Ely Appleton leading, closely pursued by Ptarmigan, who was succeeded by Tabernacle, The Boy, Normanby, Alarie, Palmerston, Wheat-ear and Recorder, the next lot comprising Enterprise, Hawthornden and Kingcraft, Wild Flower being now beaten off a long way in the rear of everything. Three-quarters of a mile from home the ruck closed up with the two leaders, who, however, maintained their positions to the half-mile post, where both gave way simultaneously, Stanley just at this moment running up into a prominent place on the right of the field, but he as rapidly gave way again. The retirement of Ely Appleton and Ptarmigan left Alarie with a slight lead of Tabernacle, and The Boy next the rails, and Normanby and Enterprise in the centre, Recorder, Palmerston and Wheat-ear following just in their track, and in this order they came sweeping round the bend. The moment they were fairly in the line for home, Alarie, The Boy and Tabernacle were in trouble, and Normanby immediately afterwards hung out signals of distress, as did also Palmerston, after Chaloner, by vigorous riding, had endeavored to get to the front. While this was going on, Kingcraft, coming up with the celebrated rush which proved so successful in the Derby, took the lead next the rails, Grimshaw, who had been lying with him throughout the race, sticking Hawthornden along and taking second place at the same instant on the right of his horses. It was now observed that the finish lay between the pair, and Kingcraft was going so strong and well that his backers shouted excitedly, and all sorts of odds were offered on him. Hawthornden, however, overhauled him at the distance, and, after a brief effort for supremacy, French was obliged to raise his whip, the movement eliciting a tremendous scream from the fielders, renewed again and again as Hawthornden was seen to be forging ahead about 200 yards from the winning chair. The remainder of the struggle requires but little description, for despite French's determined riding and Kingcraft's gameness, Hawthornden maintained his advantage and won very cleverly by half a length. Wheat-ear headed Enterprise and Recorder opposite the stand, and secured the third position five lengths in the rear of her stable companion and a head in front of Enterprise, fourth, Recorder being fifth, about a length away. Then came Bonny Swell, who passed the pulstand, four lengths from the half dozen, The Boy being sixth, Tabernacle seventh, Palmerston eighth, and Stanley ninth. Then came Alaric and Captivator, all the others pulling up on the post, with the exception of Wild Flower, who walked in with the colt, Sword. The result of the race was received with tremendous cheering from the ring, and the crowd outside were vociferous in their plaudits, Grimshaw coming in for his share of congratulation for his fine and patient riding. Time, 3 min. 18½ sec. Net value of the stakes, £5,350.

The DONCASTER CUP, value 300 sovs; weight for age; penalties and allowances; Cup Course (about 2 miles 5 fur.)

Major Fridolin's ch f Sornette, by Light—Surprise, 3 years, 6st. 11lbs.....Handley 1

Lord Falmouth's b f Gertrude, 3 years, 6st. 11lbs	F. Webb 2
Sir C. Legard's ch c Border Knight, 4 years, 8st 5lbs	Snowden 3
T. Hughes' b c Starter, 4 years, 8st. 5lbs	Cannon 4

Betting even on Sornette, 3 to 1 against Gertrude, 7 to 2 against Border Knight, and 8 to 1 against Starter. The latter cut out the work, followed by Sornette, pulling double, Border Knight bringing up the rear. This order was maintained past the stand and round the bend, when the French filly drew up to Starter, and the pair went on a dozen lengths ahead of Gertrude, Sornette taking up the running as they went round the clump. On appearing in sight, Sornette held a couple of lengths' lead, but the lot closed up at the Rifle Butts. Half a mile from home Starter was beaten, and Gertrude took second place, the race being reduced to a match up the straight between Gertrude and Sornette, the French filly easily retaining her advantage, and winning by half a length. Border Knight, pulling up, was a bad third, and Starter last.

THE RACE FOR THE ST. LEGER—DOUBLE VICTORY OF THE FRENCH MARE SORNETTE—ENGLISH AND FRENCH RACE HORSES—DEATH OF SUN LIGHT—DEFEAT OF THE ST. LEGER WINNER—THE FAVORITE FOR NEXT YEAR'S DERBY.

In another column will be found a detailed report of the great race for the Doncaster St. Leger, and the unexpected victory of a complete outsider, Hawthornden. It is therefore unnecessary to allude here to this memorable race, beyond stating that James Grimshaw rode the winner in superb style, waiting like a shadow on the favorite, Kingcraft, in the most patient manner; and, when the final set-to between the two horses at the finish came, Hawthornden had the most left in him, and he won the race by half a length. The exultation of the book makers was only equalled when Caller Ou, as despised an outsider as Hawthornden, beat the Derby winner, Kettledrum, over the same course and for the same race, nine years before. The winner belongs to a Mr. Morgan, a London merchant, hitherto more identified with steeple chasers than race horses, and who has been rather famous for his bad luck in running seconds with his animals. He became the owner of Hawthornden the Thursday before the Derby, for $4,500 and besides the stake, which is worth over $26,000, he won in bets $50,000, one of them being $25,000 to $500, taken two days before the race. Hawthornden is engaged in the Cesarewitch Stakes at Newmarket (for which race he carries 110 lbs., including 12 lbs. extra, and is now the favorite), and in the Cambridgeshire, where he carries 119 lbs., including 12 lbs. penalty for winning the Ledger.

The other racing events were of an interesting character. Major Fridolin's French bred three year old filly Sornette, winner of the Prize of Paris at home, here won the FitzWilliam Stakes, beating five others, among them Gamos, the Oaks victress, who, however, was giving her 10 lbs. Two days afterwards she came out and won the Doncaster Cup, beating Gertrude, the winner of the Yorkshire Oaks and Great Yorkshire Stakes; Border Knight, the winner of the Brighton Stakes and Cup and the Great Yorkshire Handicap, and Starter, who won the Goodwood Stakes in a canter last year. Nor was Sornette the only French bred winner at Doncaster, for Don Carlos, another exiled son of Monarque, won the Queen's Plate easily. English racing men are at last beginning to acknowledge that French thoroughbreds are fully the equals of their own, but it has required the experience taught them in such racing wonders as Monarque, Gladiateur, Fille d'Air and Sornette to convince them of the fact. In a spirit of self laudation they endeavor to account for it by alleging that the climate of France is more congenial to the development of the race-horse than England, and that the animals in France are not so much knocked about by excessive racing as in their own country. Certainly these are surprising admissions to hear now from English turfmen after the widely different story we have for years been listening to from the same professed authorities.

The Champagne Stakes, by many regarded as the key race to the Derby mystery of the ensuing year, was won by Mr. Merry's two year old colt, King of the Forrest, by Scottish Chief, by a head only, after a magnificent race with Ripponden; only four started. Mr. Merry has again in the winner the first favorite for the Derby, but when we look at the long list of such favorites he has had in Thormanby, Dundee, Scottish Chief, Student, Liddington, Marksman, Sunshine and others, and remember that one only, Thormanby, has realised his two year old promise by winning the Blue Ribbon at Epsom, we may well hesitate in adopting the Russley colors as the prospectively successful ones in the great event of May next. The day after Hawthornden had carried off the St. Leger, he was brought out to run a widely different race, for the Portland Plate of $1,000, a handicap dash of less than three quarters of a mile, with no fewer than twenty runners in it. Staying, and not speed, is the Leger winner's forte, and although he ran respectably, he was raised when his jockey found he could not win. Heather Bell won the Badminton Handicap, Agility the rich Park Hill Stakes, Queen of the Gipsies (Mr. Merry's) the Nursery Plate, and Sornette the Cup.

In the race for the St. Leger, Sunlight fractured the fetlock of his near hind leg, and his recovery being hopeless, a friendly bullet put him out of misery. He was a wonderfully handsome and speedy horse, but the rankest coward that ever looked through a bridle.

BASE BALL.

THE WHITE STOCKING VICTORIES.

The Signal Defeat of the New Champions.

CHICAGO vs. NEW YORK.

The transfer of the whip pennant from the flag staff of the Atlantics to that of the Mutuals on the 22d of Sept. led to an indignant protest by the Chicago papers, their editors not hesitating to charge the result to fraudulent collusion between the two clubs. The Chicago press, when the untrained and unorganized nine of their club naturally sustained defeat at the hands of better trained nines, were at a loss for abusive epithets to bestow on their unfortunate professionals; but when experience led to changes and to more organized efforts for success, the dead ball was substituted for the lively ball, and the Chicago nine for the first time were afforded opportunities to show their skill, and the beneficial reforms had led to a series of well earned triumphs, these self same Chicago papers could not sufficiently laud the "professional dead beats" and "congregation of frauds," as the White Stockings had previously been called by them. With success came the applause of those who had previously hooted, and yet the nine was composed of the same players, with but one exception. So much for the consistency of the Chicago press, as shown in their comments on base ball matters. In regard to the charge of desiring to hold the championship pennant in this city at all costs, we will show the Chicago writers how baseless was their imputation of alleged fraudulent collusion. When the Mutuals had won the "whip pennant" from the Atlantics, their managers openly stated that if any club in the country now thought they could win the pennant from them, they should be allowed a full opportunity to do so, as the Mutual Club would be content with no nominal title—in fact, nothing but a really legitimate championship. Following up this manly statement came the challenge from the White Stockings, and, though the Mutuals could very well have based their claim upon the victories already won from the Chicago Club, they preferred to give the reconstructed nine a chance to redeem the errors of their ways, and hence the opening of the new series, the first game of which—played in the presence of some eight or ten thousand people on Sept. 27th—resulted in the signal success of the White Stockings by a score of 22 to 11. Before giving the details of this contest, we will briefly refer to the work accomplished by the Chicago nine since they were reconstructed. Since Craver was expelled from the Chicago Club for alleged dishonorable conduct, and Duffy, of the Eckford Club, was substituted, the White Stockings have won the following games with professional nines:—

Chicago	23	Forest City, of Rockford	14
Chicago	13	Forest City, of Rockford	6
Chicago	15	Forest City, of Cleveland	7
Chicago	24	Forest City, of Cleveland	8
Chicago	12	Atlantic	4
Chicago	9	Forest City, of Cleveland	4
Chicago	10	Cincinnati	6
Chicago	22	Eckford, Brooklyn	8
Chicago	9	Atlantic, Brooklyn	4
Chicago	12	Athletic, Philadelphia	11
Chicago	23	Mutual, New York	11
Total	171	Total	88

They have lost but one game, and that was with the Forest City nine, of Rockford; score, 14 to 7 in favor of the Rockford nine. In our last issue we gave a detailed report of the triumph of the White Stockings over the Atlantics, together with the telegraphic announcement of their greater victory in Philadelphia. Below we give a full report of their contest with the Mutuals on Sept. 27th:—

First Innings.—At 3 P. M., Ferguson having been chosen as umpire and the White Stockings sent to the bat, the game began. McAtee, after waiting for a good ball and failing to strike at the one he did get, took his first on three balls, and by a passed ball made his second. Wood was then easily disposed of at first, by E. Mills. McAtee getting to third. By Cuthbert's pop fly and bounder to left field McAtee got home, but Cuthy was captured by Hatfield at second on a good throw by C. Mills. Flynn then hit safe for his base, and Treacy followed with a safe one towards Martin, and, by a mull of E. Mills from a throw by Charley, Treacy got to second. Flynn getting home, but Treacey was left, King striking out. On the other side, Hatfield followed McAtee's example and took his base on three balls, but he did more, viz., stole his second on the same ball, King having the ball way back of the catcher's position. By a passed ball he got to third, after which Meyerle caught out Eggler on a high foul. By another short passed ball Hatfield stole home. Patterson then hit a ball to Treacy's neighborhood, and, of course, retired, and, as Nelson hit a ball into Flynn's hands, the innings closed with the totals at 2 to 1 in favor of the White Stockings.

2. Meyerle opened in this innings with a short ball to Swandell and retired at first. Pinkham then hit a high ball to right field, affording Martin a chance for a catch, but he allowed Swandell to run for it, and the result was Pinkham reached his second, or, rather, Treacy did for him; Duffy then retired on a high foul taken by C. Mills, but by McAtee's good bounder past third Pinkham came home and McAtee reached his second. Wood then hit to Hatfield, who threw the ball low to first and Wood had a life given him. By a high throw of C. Mills to third McAtee got home, and Wood, who had got to second on a passed ball, was sent home by Chubbers hit, Flynn also getting his base by a good hit, but Cuthbert was forced out at third, the innings closing, with an addition of three runs to the Chicago score, with none earned. The Mutuals were put out in one, two, three order every inning.

3. Flynn led off in this innings with a hit to Swandell and retired at 1st, and Treacy ought to have been second out, but Patterson dropped the ball and Treacy took his 2d; King was then caught out by Hatfield, but Meyerle, by a hot bounder to centre field, sent Treacy home and took his 3d, Pinkham's good hit sending him home; Duffy then ended the innings by retiring at 1st, Hatfield throwing swift after muffing the ball. On the other side Wolters popped up a ball for McAtee and took a seat, after which Swandell got his base on called balls, and getting to 2d on a passed ball was sent to 3d by Hatfield's good hit to right short. John then stole to 2d and by an overpitch Swandell came in, as did Hatfield afterwards. Eggler then retired on a foul fly to King's hand, and as Patterson popped up a ball for Pinkham to take the innings closed, the totals now standing at 7 to 3 in favor of Chicago, neither party having as yet shown any really sharp play.

4. In this innings McAtee opened by tipping out; and Wood, sending a high ball to Patterson, also retired—two outs and no runs. Cuthbert then took his base on called balls, after which Flynn hit Wolters with a hot ball, and by a hasty throw to E. Mills Flynn made his 2d and Cuthbert got to 3d; but there they were left, Treacy's high ball being taken by Hatfield in George Wright's style—result, first "whitewash" for Chicago. Nelson sent a ball to Duffy, who passed it to 1st a little wide, and, McAtee muffing it, Nelson made his 2d. E. Mills then hit a bound to Treacy, on which he sent Nelson home and made his 2d, and by Martin's good hit E. Mills got home. By Charley Mills' hit to Prof. Wood, Martin was forced off at 3d, Treacy getting home and Wood on overpitch he put on 3d; Wolters was then put out by Duffy to McAtee, and after E. Mills had stolen home on a short passed ball, Swandell sent a hot ball to Duffy, who failed to stop it, and Swandell had a life. It did not avail much, as Hatfield retired on a fly out by King. The innings closed with the totals at 7 to 6, with the Chicagos still in the van.

5. King opened play in this innings with a chance to Nelson for a foul fly and retired, but Pinkham "slugged" the ball for a four base hit. Pinkham then took his base on three balls, but by Duffy's hit was forced off at 2d, Duffy narrowly escaping at 1st, McAtee's high hit to Eggler ending the innings for the one run earned by Meyerle. On the other side Martin, by Duffy and Pinkham disposed of the two first strikers at 1st, and Nelson's high ball was captured by Flynn, the totals now standing at 8 to 6, with 2 to 1 earned in favor of Chicago.

6. Wood led off with a liner to Hatfield, which was pretilly held; Cuthbert then hit one of those safe bounding balls close to the foul ball line, which easily gave him his 1st, but by Patterson's wild throw to 2d Cuthbert got in. Flynn was then disposed of on the fly by E. Mills, and had Eggler held Treacy's high hit the Chicagos would have been retired for a single, but he dropped it, and Treacy made his 2d. King then hit safe for 1st, and Meyerle, hitting a good bounder for his third, another run was scored, and by Pinkham's hit to 2d a still another was added, Duffy ending the Wolters closing the innings. E. Mills, after being missed on a up by King, took his base on three balls, and by Martin's good hit got round, C. Mills' safe hit to left sending him home. By a high throw of King's to 2d another run was scored, and, as Wolters also hit safe, a third run was scored, but then Treacy made a handsome catch off Eggler's bat, Patterson being retired at 1st by Meyerle, the innings closing with the totals at 12 to 9, still in favor of Chicago.

7. McAtee opened with a good hit and took his base, Wood following suit. By Cuthbert's hit to Nelson, Wood was forced out at 2d, Flynn's hit giving him his 2d base. Treacy then hit a ball to Patterson, who ran in well for it, but dropped it, and as King hit safely to right field for his 2d, two more runs were scored. The next two strikers, however, were easily disposed of, the innings yielding four runs. The Mutuals opened with good hits, Nelson, E. Mills and Martin barring bases, and Charley Mills' high fly now gave Duffy an easy catch and retired, and, though Wolters hit a good ball to left field, Treacy managed to get it on the run in fine style, and as Swandell hit a ball to McAtee the innings ended for the one run scored, the nine being 4 to 10 in favor of Chicago. Thus far the game had been one marked by poor play on both sides, and, in fact, it was anything but the fine display expected on either side and not to compare either with the Atlantic or Athletic contests, as far as fielding was concerned.

8. In this innings Duffy led off and tipped out, after which McAtee sent a hot one to Nelson and earned his base. The next two strikers were, however, prettily caught by Eggler, the innings closing with a whitewash. The Mutuals now had six runs to make to get square and only two innings left to do it in, with the chances decidedly against them. Hatfield led off with an easy ball to Wood and got to second on a passed ball, was sent home by Chubbers hit, Flynn also getting his base by a good hit, but Cuthbert was forced out at third, the innings closing, with an addition of three runs to the Chicago score, with none earned. The Mutuals were put out in one, two, three order every inning.

3. Flynn led off in this innings with a hit to Swandell and retired at 1st, and Treacy ought to have been second out, but Patterson dropped the ball and Treacy took his 2d; King was then caught out by Hatfield, but Meyerle, by a hot bounder to centre field, sent Treacy home and took his 3d, Pinkham's good hit sending him home; Duffy then ended the innings by retiring at 1st, Hatfield throwing swift after muffing the ball. On the other side Wolters popped up a ball for McAtee and took a seat, after which Swandell got his base on called balls, and getting to 2d on a passed ball was sent to 3d by Hatfield's good hit to right short. John then stole to 2d and by an overpitch Swandell came in, as did Hatfield afterwards. Eggler then retired on a foul fly to King's hand, and as Patterson popped up a ball for Pinkham to take the innings closed, the totals now standing at 7 to 3 in favor of Chicago, neither party having as yet shown any really sharp play.

4. In this innings McAtee opened by tipping out; and Wood, sending a high ball to Patterson, also retired—two outs and no runs. Cuthbert then took his base on called balls, after which Flynn hit Wolters with a hot ball, and by a hasty throw to E. Mills Flynn made his 2d and Cuthbert got to 3d; but there they were left, Treacy's high ball being taken by Hatfield in George Wright's style—result, first "whitewash" for Chicago. Nelson sent a ball to Duffy, who passed it to 1st a little wide, and, McAtee muffing it, Nelson made his 2d. E. Mills then hit a bound to Treacy, on which he sent Nelson home and made his 2d, and by Martin's good hit E. Mills got home. By Charley Mills' hit to Prof. Wood, Martin was forced off at 3d, Treacy getting home and Wood on overpitch he put on 3d; Wolters was then put out by Duffy to McAtee, and after E. Mills had stolen home on a short passed ball, Swandell sent a hot ball to Duffy, who failed to stop it, and Swandell had a life. It did not avail much, as Hatfield retired on a fly out by King. The innings closed with the totals at 7 to 6, with the Chicagos still in the van.

5. King opened play in this innings with a chance to Nelson for a foul fly and retired, but Pinkham "slugged"

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Oct. 3, 1870.

WE HAVE HAD several sensations during the past week, viz.:—The advent of Fisk's bouffe opera troupe, the appearance of Seebach in a fresh role, the continuance of Nilsson in her concerts, and the funeral ceremonies over the remains of Admiral Farragut. But there was no fight among our professional friends, who seemed to have played themselves out during the previous week, much to the disgust and disappointment of the Metropolitan habitues, who assemble there to discuss other people's affairs, and "take stock" of anything that may turn up among those who practice at that bar. Well, about Fisk's bouffers first!—They have made a hit if others have not—a ten strike, we might term it, for they have brought down the house and everything before them; and their staying chances are good, from the fact that the same pious and unadulterated critics who lammed the "Black Crook" and thus helped to popularize it have likewise opened on "Little Faust," speaking of the nastiness of the principal performers, and laying bare the physical charms of Montaland, Silly, and others of the troupe. Now there is nothing more attractive to the good people of our big metropolis than this so-called "nastiness;" they seem to cry for it, and never fail to "go for it" when these moral-reformers and virtuously-inclined critics bring such "nastiness" to their notice. So, wrath with Fisk's legs, Montaland's face and so forth, the pictures of these gushing creatures, and the religious notices of the pious press, the bouffers have been pretty cleverly advertised, and the result has been crowded houses. Seebach, the other newly-imported artist, has been doing "Mary Stuart," etc., and though a very clever actress, it is not likely that Grau will find much encouragement in her, from a speculation from a "commercial point of view." The Germans are so completely absorbed in King William and his dispatches to Augusta, that they fail to see back of those royalists, and thus it is that Seebach is left out in the cold. But "she may be happy yet." Of Nilsson, we have but little to say in this introductory; she is getting along comfortably, does not come up to what had been said of her in the puffs preliminary. About these celebrities we will now make a few

NURSERY RHYMES.

There is a young lady named Nilsson,
Which sounds much better than Wilson,
To hear this one sing,
You three dollars must bring,
And that will soon wind up Miss Nilsson.

There is a Dutch actress named Seebach,
Who, her country'folks say, will soon be back,
She was brought out by Grau,
But she'll not likely draw,
Then what'll become of poor Seebach!

There is a new French opera bouffe,
Who never perform in a rough way,
They sing for Jim Fisk,
And that's enough all the risk,
And that's hunky for new op'ra bouffe.

.....One night last week we went to the Fifth Avenue Theatre and there we heard a little joke "that did our eyes exprise." A youth, who came in as usual just late enough to disturb the audience by the noise made by his creaky boots, stood up by his seat to remove and thus call attention to his new and gorgeous fifteen dollar fall overcoat. In doing so, this obdurate and wicked young man completely shut the stage out of view from the person behind, who tapped the reckless young fellow on the shoulder and requested him to sit down, "for," said he, "it is never wise to put yourself up between 'Man and Wife.'".....The churches are doing pretty well now, nearly all being liberally patronized, without regard to denomination, persuasion, sect or creed. The worthy and exemplary pastors look as good as new after their recess for repairs, and they expound the scriptural teachings with a vim only witnessed at the opening of a new season. The pious flocks turn out in large numbers, harnessed up in all the new-fangled contrivances that the fashion market affords. In fact it is a question whether feminine display in the church doesn't take the rag off those who make our theatres so brilliant of nights. It's sort of nip and tuck between them, perhaps, but our opinion is that, of the two, the church makes the best show!.....Tell you another joke:—"Our Jim," you are all aware, has very little regard for the Sabbath day, and that day he invariably picks out for shooting excursions. James is not a success as a hunter, but he will persist that he was cut out for a rare old sport. Last Sunday the boy went over to Long Island after "barn pheasants," for you must know that he prefers to hunt among the residences of parvenus instead of scouring "the wild woods free." His dog—Tycoon he calls it—sighted a chicken in a field close by; Jim went for his little game, but, in his eagerness to capture his prey alive, he walked over an old well which had been covered with boards, one of which broke and James "went in." His cries brought a number of people to his rescue, among whom was the pastor of the village church, just returning from his Sabbath labors. A rope was let down into the well, and the amphibious creature was hauled out. "My dear son," said the pastor, "had you been properly brought up in your early days you would not have been brought up in such a distressing plight as you are now in." James went home a wiser and wetter youth, but he got the chicken.....Isn't it a curious thing about the eye sight of stage managers? Did you never notice their organs of vision? They are all "google-eyed"—all got strabismus—in fact, they always have a case in the eye. These little squibs are not very hard to comprehend, provided that you have any gumption at all.....Lotta is a cunning little thing, isn't she? She has been playing "Heart's Ease," at Niblo's, for the past three weeks, but withdrew it on the 1st. Among her admirers there will many a heart cease to beat when she withdraws herself from the mimic stage. This is soft sort of stuff to write, but we have to put in a few licks of that kind to please the ladies. Better far to speak in favor of the ladies than against them, as some chaps we know, do. Hear us rhyme about such scallywags:—

THE MAN AND ACTRESS.

The right of speaking through the press was lately exercised
By one who, by his arguments, the world has much surprised;
His man assumed the given point, and says that he will not retract
That women on the stage should never be allowed to act.
We rate the chap a bore; and all the votaries of the stage
We think will coincide with us, that he'll never be a sage.

.....Judge—Been in all night, have you? How do you feel this morning?

Joe—Oh, "I feel like a morning star."

Judge—If I should give you thirty days you'd feel still more like a mourning star, I guess.

Joe—Don't do it, Judge, and I'll tell you that gag about the "Rollicking Rams."

Judge—We want none of your gags here. You must have been beastly drunk from what the officer tells me.

Joe—I was beastly drunk, judge, and I suppose I must have——well, you know how it is yourself!

The people in court roared with laughter at the judge's expense, and with a caution to go and sin no more, Joe was allowed to make his exit.....The southern theatres are beginning to prepare for an early opening, and managers and people are already taking their departure from this city. The Galveston, Texas, Theatre promises to be a shady retreat for the warm-hearted southerners, as it is to have an ever-green-wall with vine-ing bowers to add to its attractiveness. They leave soon .....Its bad enough for a man to bunk in church, and take a quiet snooze while the worthy preacher is doing his prettiest, but how much worse it is for a man to practice such weaknesses in a theatre, where the adjuncts of music and applause ought to keep awake any person of moderate pretensions to decency. We intended to bring in a very pretty moral at this point, but the idea has escaped us in a heavy press of other matter. The heavy press of other matter is his lunch.—OUR JIM.].....They have knocked down the fares on our city railroads to five cents, but the conductors, it is said, do not think this sort of knock down pays. Talking of these people, when is a conductor a pictorial artist? When he whistles—for don't he make car tunes then? Some other feller made this for us, which will account for its inferiority.....A stage carpenter is not necessarily an omnibus builder, as many have supposed. And talking about this saw did and chiseling set of people, we shall now, by "universal request," manufacture a few neat and well fitting rhymes about

STAGE CARPENTERS.

Stage carpenters are astute men—
All must agree in that—
They know man's ways and quickly tell
A sharper from a flat;
They're always in their places, and ne'er
From this to that one drift;
And tho' so steady, yet they will
From this to that place shift.

They never keep hotels or inns
For guests or any orders,
But still their business does compel
Them to keep some borders.
They never willingly would help
To cause one a mishap,
Yet they've been known for many a fake
To coolly set a trap.

Their life is not monotonous—
Quite opposite we ween—
For while they work, though in one place,
They've always change of scene.
They're gentle men, and always are
Of wash and town premiers,
And, though they've not an enemy,
They always have tormentors.

We wish them well—may each one find
His fortune fast improves,
And may his scene of life alway
Slide smoothly in the grooves;
May he grow richer, richer still
Until he comes to be
A property man, by which we mean
A man of property.

City Summary.

WALLACK'S THEATRE WAS opened for the regular season on Sept. 26th, with Sheridan's comedy of "The Rivals," the full cast of which we presented in our past issue. Long before the performance commenced, every seat in the house was occupied with an intelligent audience, and at the time of the rising of the curtain the lobbies were filled with triple rows of spectators standing. The first hearty welcome was extended to Mr. Thomas Baker, and his excellent band of musicians. On the rising of the curtain Mr. Leonard was the first to enter, immediately followed by Mr. Holland, who both received a recognition. The drawing of the flats at the end of the scene revealed Miss Madeline Henriques, who was most enthusiastically welcomed. The appearance of Miss Emily Mestayer and Mr. John Gilbert was the signal for the outbreak of the heartiest applause we ever witnessed, and Mr. John Brougham, who entered a short time subsequently, was placed in quite an embarrassing position. The audience finding that it was impossible to express their gratification in the loudness of their applause seemed suddenly to determine, as if by one will, that its continuance should mark its relative merit, and it was prolonged to that extent, notwithstanding the courteous acknowledgements of this genial actor, as to considerably disconcert the artists upon the stage. Mr. George Clark and Miss Helen Tracy, both strangers to these boards, and the latter to the city, were accorded a cheerful welcome. The auditorium in its new dress, with the colors of the back ground relieved by the elegant toilets of the ladies, never presented a more charming aspect. We do not intend to offer any criticism of the acting; the subject is too familiar to our readers; we will simply say that the comedy was performed in the usual Wallackian style. Every scene in the comedy was freshly painted and most appropriate in design. Mr. Lester Wallack was called before the curtain during the evening, and after the hearty applause with which he was welcomed had subsided, he, in a neat speech, modestly returned thanks to his audience and communicated to them a portion of his plans for the present campaign which had been so auspiciously commenced. The business has continued excellent during the week. Mr. Alberry's comedy, entitled "The Two Roses," which is still playing with success at the Vaudeville Theatre, London, Eng., is announced as being in an advanced state of preparation, and will shortly be produced.

MR. D. L. MORRIS, impersonator of Dutch characters, arrived in this city per steamer Scotia, on Sept. 26th, from London, Eng., where he acted during the past summer.

THE BLISS, THE JOYS, THE SWEETS, the shadows, the pettishness, the quarrels of matrimonial life, are happily depicted in "Man and Wife," every evening at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, to large and enthusiastic audiences.

THERE OF THE CHORISTERS lately engaged in the representation of "Little Faust," at the Olympic Theatre, brought suit in the Common Marine Police Court on Oct. 1st, against James A. Oates, for one weeks' salary each. It appears from the evidence that these three choristers, with a number of others, were engaged by Col. T. Allston Brown for Mrs. Oates, and it was proven at the hearing that they were engaged for "the run of the piece," while the choristers engaged in this city were engaged only from week to week.—When Lina Edwin opened her theatre, these choristers engaged themselves at that establishment, leaving Mr. Oates without any other notice than that given after the performance of the Saturday that they left. On salary day of the following week they demanded their salary for their last week's services. Mr. Oates refused to pay, hence the suit. Edward Farr, Mr. Corrister and Col. Allston Brown appeared as witnesses for Mr. Oates, and by them it was proved that the said choristers were engaged for the run of the piece, and that any actor, chorister, or any member of a company breaking his engagement without two or at least one weeks' notice, forfeits his last weeks' salary. Upon these facts the Judge decided in favor of Mr. Oates.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic and general agent, 643 Broadway, has in another column an extensive list of notices and announcements of interest to the profession. Stars and combinations are informed that there are still some open dates for the Spalding, Bidwell & Macdonough and Laura Keene circuits, and stock artists are wanted for the Academy of Music, Omaha, Neb. Managers in search of attractive novelties are also referred to his cards, which contain information respecting several, among the number "Little Nell," Oliver Doud Byron and the Fox and Denier pantomime troupe.

THE GLOBE THEATRE is the title by which the old New York Theatre will henceforth be known. It has been leased by Mr. A. R. Spencer, and under his immediate supervision it has been remodeled. The stone tower, which has so long been an eye sore to the Broadway pedestrian, has been razed, and in its stead a handsome, ornate, Mansard roof greets the eye. The entire exterior front of the building has been remodeled and now presents a neat and chaste appearance. A carved entablature of elaborate design, and tinted, has been placed in front of the roof, and the top thereof has been ornamented by a light carved railing. The entrance to the gallery is entirely separate and distinct, and will be found at the southern end of the building. The main entrance in the centre, and at the northern end an entrance to the dress circle communicating with the main entrance, but for purposes of egress it will communicate directly with the street, thus avoiding a crowd in the main passage. The box office will be found in the main hallway on the right as one enters. This hallway has been newly frescoed. Upon entering the auditorium we find that it has been thoroughly cleansed and freshly painted. The lower floor is divided into a parquet and parquet circle; the latter is supplied with comfortable cane seated chairs, numbering 250; the parquet has been supplied with patent iron folding chairs of the latest pattern, the backs being somewhat higher than those in general use, and with a greater backward inclination, which renders them exceedingly comfortable; these are upholstered in red enamelled cloth, and number 300. On either side is private box richly carpeted and upholstered in crimson, capable of accommodating six persons. Ascending the dress circle we find that two rows or more of the front seats around the entire circle have been converted into a balcony, and supplied with iron chairs of the same pattern as those in the parquet—these number 150. The seats in the dress circle are long benches upholstered in crimson plush, which are divided at appropriate distances by spacious aisles. This portion of the house will seat 400, with considerable space for standing room in the rear. Above this tier is the gallery, which runs around three sides of the building, and which has been thoroughly cleansed and put in good order. It will accommodate 600 persons, making the total accommodation for 1,100 people. The stage has been put in good order and new scenery is being painted; the stock thereof will be increased as the demands of the performances may require. It will be opened as a vaudeville and variety theatre this evening, Oct. 3d, with the following company:—Lisa Weber and her complete burlesque company, who will appear in the burlesque entitled "Ernani;" a grand ballet under the direction of Signor Costa, with Mlle. Betty Rigl as the star, supported by Mlles. Devere and Bertha, premiere danseuses, Misses Sallie Maddox, Ella Weigle, Miles. Josephine and Theresa, corypheés; and a full corps de ballet. In the Ethiopian department will be found Hughey Dougherty, stump orator and comedian; John Hart, comedian; Carter Hovey, Add Ryman, James Gaynor, comedians, and Andy McKee, song and dance. The vocal department will comprise Master Barney, in Dutch songs; Sheridan and Mack, in protean sketches and songs; Charles Vivian, tenor, and Miss Agnes Sutherland, balladist. Among the other attractions will be found Mons. Tanner and his troupe of performing dogs and monkeys; Mr. G. L. Stoute, G. L. Johnes and others. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday of each week. A full report of the opening performance will appear in our next issue.

A VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL CONCERT, for the benefit of the German Patriotic Aid Society Fund, was given at Steinway Hall, on Sunday evening, Oct. 2d, when the following artists rendered their aid:—Miss Anna Mehlig, pianist; Miss Anna Rosetti, soprano; W. Candidus, tenor; Fred. Steina, baritone; F. Remmerts, basso; Mr. Pecher, organist; Theodore Thomas, A. Pauer and Carl Bergmann, conductors. The Liederkranz and Arion Societies sang the concerted music, and there was an orchestra of 150 performers furnished by the German Aschenbroedel Society.

"THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD," a dramatization in four acts, by Augustin Daly, has just been entered for copyright in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D. C., and it is also announced as being in preparation for speedy production at the Fifth Avenue Theatre.

MR. JOHN BROUGHAM is engaged in writing a new drama for Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams, for which he is to receive $3,000.

MISS CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG will shortly start on a tour of the country, assisted by a corps of artists, among whom will be Mr. James M. Wehli, who came over with the Nilsson troupe.

HENRY C. JARRETT, of Niblo's Garden, accompanied by his wife, sailed for Europe on Sept. 28th.

DAN BRYANT leaves for San Francisco, Cal., by the overland route on Wednesday, Oct. 5th. He will play an engagement of two weeks at the California Theatre, appearing in Irish comedy.

THE NILSSON CONCERTS are progressing. We attended the fifth of the series at Steinway Hall, on Friday, Sept. 30th, and though the equinoctial storm prevailed that day, and the night proved exceedingly disagreeable for a visit to a concert hall, nevertheless the attendance on the occasion was large, nearly every seat being occupied. The programme was a choice one, and especially offered free scope for an exhibition of the vocal powers of the principal cantatrice of the evening, including as it did the "Ah fors'e lui," from "Traviata;" the grand scena from "Lucia," with flute obligato; and the favorite English ballad "Home, Sweet Home." There was a variation from the programme of the first concerts in the list of instrumental performers, Miss Anna Mehlig being substituted for Wehli as the solo pianist—and a good change it is, too—for Miss Mehlig is unquestionably one of the most finished solo piano players that has ever visited this country, and, being a German, she will prove far more attractive than Wehli. The programme opened with the overture to "Zampa," and it was performed wretchedly for an orchestra composed of members of the Philharmonic Society, with Mareisek as maestro. Indeed, the orchestral accompaniments throughout the evening were such as to merit hissing at times. We were glad to see that the overture was received with the silence its performace deserved. Next came the baritone, Signor Verger, and the old opera tenor, Brignoli, who met with a rather cool reception. They sang the duo from "Bellisario" finely, however, Signor Verger's clear, pure voice being heard to advantage. Miss Mehlig then made her appearance, and she was not only greeted with warm applause, but called out after her masterly performance of one of Liszt's nonsensical and pretentious "Rhapsodies," as he calls them, the technical difficulties of which Miss Mehlig executed with a grace of manner and style of expression worthy of better music. After the usual delay to give better effect to the first entree, the singer of the evening made her appearance, and as the fair Swede walked to the front of the stage and made her bow, all eyes were bent upon her, and her every movement was duly criticised. She was of course received with applause, but the hands of the hired claquers could be readily distinguished. She is easy and natural in her movements. Her action throughout is more that of a singer on the stage than on the concert platform; in fact it is plain to perceive that her place is in opera. She is not a concert singer. Knowing her managers, and the clap-trap style in which they place an artist before the public, we were not filled with high expectations; still we have to confess to a disappointment; and instead of being obliged to acknowledge a superiority over all other artists who had previously made their advent in the metropolis, we found ourselves regretting the absence of Parepa, and remembering the pure tones of Jenny Lind with a feeling of satisfaction which Miss Nilsson's singing failed to make us forget. Her compass of voice is rather limited for a singer of such European fame, and though of very pure quality and considerable power in the middle register, her upper notes when at all forced, are weak, and she reaches them with some difficulty. She sings with a natural expression and much taste, but lacks the finish and execution of a thoroughly accomplished vocalist. In fact, Miss Nilsson, though a first class prima donna and one who no doubt shines in opera far more brilliantly than in the concert hall, is not a second Jenny Lind, nor is she superior to many of the sweet singers who have visited us of late years. She was of course loudly encored, and in response sang one of her Swedish melodies with due effect. After the Italian, German and Swedish artists, came the French violinist, Mons. Vieuxtemps, an artist we had not before listened to for twenty years. He played one of his own compositions, a "fantasie," but what with the miserable orchestral accompaniment, and a failure of one of the strings of his violin in the first tune, the performance proved to be anything but a success; in fact, he had to change his violin before the conclusion of the piece. We heard the same expressive style of playing, but we missed the remarkable accuracy of his old-time fingering. Following Vieuxtemps, came an artist "native and to the manner born," in the person of Miss Annie Louise Carr, a contralto with as pure a quality of voice and method as we have heard for years. She has, as yet, to acquire the artistic finish of Madame Phillips—who, by the way, was present in one of the lower reserved seats—when there will be few to equal her. She rendered a cavatina from "Semiramide," with great taste and expression, and on an encore sang "Kathleen Mavourneen" prettily. The grand scena from "Lucia" closed the first part of the concert, and in this Miss Nilsson brought down the house! She was loudly applause, her remarkable execution of the Rondo with flute accompaniment being a feature of the concert. In the second part of the concert she sang "Home, Sweet Home," with pleasing expression, but not better than we have heard Louise Kellogg and others sing it. Mons. Verger was also encored for his fine rendering of Di Provenza, from "Traviata," in the second part. To conclude we have to inform our friends that the concert troupe of Strakosch's they will listen to a company of first class vocalists and instrumentalists, the ladies being the stars in both classes; but in Christine Nilsson they must not expect anything but a charming young Swede, of attractive person, natural in her style, and with a good voice of pure tone and quality and used with skill. But she is not a vocal prodigy or a second Malibran or Jenny Lind, in fact not even a Parepa.

OPERA BOUFFE again flourishes in our midst under the protection of the affable Admiral-Colonel-Prince-of-Erie-Woodstone-Fisk, Jr., at the Grand Opera House. Nothing daunted at the pecuniary failures of Bateman and Grau, some months since an agent was despatched by Mr. Fisk to Paris with carte blanche to engage the most artistic and beautiful, particularly the latter, Opera Bouffers that could be induced to sail for these shores. In the meantime public curiosity had been kept alive by attractive circulars and readable paragraphs in the newspapers relating to the artists said to be engaged. At length the troupe arrived, lithographs and photographs of the principal artists flooded the shop windows and rumors of their beauty filled the city. The prima donnas were sumptuously feasted by genial Jim, and a chosen few were permitted to feast their eyes upon these magnates of the lyric stage in the drawing room. At length the opening night arrived, Monday, Sept. 26th, and long ere the curtain rose every seat and available space of standing room was fully occupied; even that portion of the grand staircase commanding a view of the stage was blockaded. Numbers paced the spacious lobbies endeavoring here and there to catch a glimpse of the artists. We doubt if ever before so many people had gathered within the walls of this beautiful theatre. The opera "La Petite Faust" was given with the cast published in our past issue. It is a travestie upon the Italian opera of "Faust," and closely follows its action and incidents. It was magnificently placed upon the stage, no expense being spared as regards scenery, costumes or appointments. Since the initial performance the opera has been considerably curtailed and many objectionable features expurgated. Mlle. Montaland has a very beautiful face, a figure inclined to embonpoint, and a light soprano voice. She possesses a keen sense of humor, and sang and acted the character of Marguerite charmingly. She is decidedly more attractive than any of the artists who have hitherto appeared here in opera bouffe. Mlle. Lea Silly, who personated Mephisto, is an artist of ability; her action is picturesque, her figure good and her voice, although it gives slight evidence of being hard worked, is still effective, and she sings the music assigned her with skill and judgment and is rightly encored several times during the performance. M. Hittemans, who acted Valentine, is a thorough artist, who possesses great comic powers, which secured a speedy recognition from the audience. His death scene was very humorous. Montaubas, the tenor, acted and sang Faust well. He has a good presence and will undoubtedly become a favorite. The chorus, both as regards numbers and singing, was good. A ballet with Albertina, Lupo and Gangin as principals, and a full corps de ballet, executed a number of effective dances in the second act. As a whole the performance is a success, and during the week, save on one stormy night, the auditorium has been completely filled. The present programme will be continued every evening and on Saturday matinee until further notice.

MISS MARTHA WREN will appear at the Globe Theatre on Oct. 3d in Lisa Weber's burlesque company.

"WEE WILLIE WINKIE"—A new pantomime by George L. Fox—will be produced at the Olympic Theatre on Wednesday evening, the 5th, for the first time, the theatre remaining closed, for the necessary full rehearsals prior to its production, on Oct. 3d and 4th. The following ladies and gentleman will constitute the company:—Messrs. George L. Fox, clown; George Beane, pantaloon; R. Honeywood, his first appearance in America, harlequin; Miss Fanny Beane, columbine; H. H. Pratt, J. L. Debonay, G. Atkins, Mrs. A. Yeamans, Misses L. Prior, Flora Moore, and others. There will be two transformation scenes, the first, terminating the first act, entitled "The Glory of Florisette in the Home of Convolvoli;" the second, at the close of the pantomime, entitled "The Realms of Light and Beauty." There will be twenty new scenes, painted by Messrs. Hayes, Johnson and assistants.

J. G. MAEDER, composer and professor of music, an old resident of New York, who has successfully fitted a great many pupils for the operatic stage, and whose musical contributions to the dramatic stage have been numerous, advertises in our columns that he is now ready to receive pupils for the fall and winter for instruction, either for the opera, the concert room, or the drawing room of private life. There is none more capable. His address may be found in our columns.

AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE Mrs. Jas. A. Oates received a benefit on Sept. 30th, when she appeared as Ernestine in Offenbach's opera entitled "The Grand Duchess of Night," assisted by Mr. Thomas Whiffin as Mons. Chouffleuri and Miss Blanche Galton as Minnie Balandard. The second act of "Little Faust" concluded the programme. The same bill was played at the matinee and evening performance of Oct. 1st, which closed this lady's engagement at this theatre.

MISS ADA SCOTT SIDDONS closed her engagement at Wood's Museum on Oct. 1st, where she appeared during the past week in alternate performances of "Twixt Axe and Crown" and "As You Like It" until Friday evening, when "King Rene's Daughter" and the "Honeymoon" were presented, with a recitation of Sheridan's Ride by Charles H. Thorne, Jr. At the Saturday matinee the same bill was presented, and in the evening the farce entitled "My Dress Boots," "King Rene's Daughter" and the burlesque of the "Golden Butterfly" were presented. The business during the week has been fair. On Oct. 3d the Kiraify Pantomime and Ballet troupe will commence an engagement.

AT LINA EDWIN'S THEATRE the burlesques, "Black-Eyed Susing" and "Camille," were played during the past week, with Stuart Robson in the principal characters. On Friday and Saturday evenings, and at the Saturday matinee, the comedietta entitled "Who Speaks First" with Edwin Thorne in the principal role, was performed in addition to the burlesques. The business during the week was uniformly good, and decidedly encouraging to the fair manageress. This evening, Oct. 3d, a play, entitled "Barnaby Rudge," will be produced for the first time. It is a dramatization of the late Charles Dickens' novel of that name by Messrs. H. A. Weaver and J. B. Bradford, of Boston, Mass., and has been expressly prepared for Stuart Robson, who has made a study of the character of Simon Tappertit. The play is in four acts, will be presented with new scenery, costumes, appointments, an augmented company, and with the following cast:—

Simon Tappertit	Stuart Robson
Hugh	Edwin Thorne
Gabriel Varden	E. B. Holmes
Sir John Chester	F. Marsden
Edward Chester
Cashford	Eugene Eberle
Joe Willet	Harry Josephs
Ackerman	Mr. Oakley
First Prentice	Dora Herbert
Miss Miggs	Mary Stuart
Dolly Varden	Lillie Eldridge
Barnaby Rudge	Emma Cline
Dennis	H. A. Weaver
Haredale	Walter Grisdale
Lord Gordon	G. Jordan, Jr.
Old Rudge	A. D. Bullock
Mark Gilbert	C. T. Parslee
Test	Mr. Broughton
Second Prentice	Miss Germaine
Mrs. Rudge	Mrs. J. J. Prior
Emma Haredale	Miss Lewis
Mrs. Varden	Aggie Wood

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL returned to this city from Europe on Sept. 24th, per steamer Abyssinia. They are engaged for the coming season at the new museum in Philadelphia; but Mr. Benson will travel with the company supporting Miss Maggie Mitchell until his services may be required there.

MR. J. J. WATSON, late agent for Ole Bull, returned from England on Sept. 24th. He leaves this week as agent for Adelaide Phillips.

WILLIAM HIELD, the veteran actor, is fast traveling to his long home. For some time he has been lying very low in this city but was removed to his brother's residence in Hoboken, N. J., on Sept. 29th. His reason is fast leaving him.

FANNY HERRING did not leave for California under engagement to the Alhambra Theatre, San Francisco, as has been reported.

"LITTLE NELL AND THE MARCHIONESS," will be played next week at Niblo's Garden by Lotta.

THE HESS ENGLISH OPERA TROUPE open at Niblo's Garden on Oct. 24th.

"THE BLACK CROOK" will not be produced at Niblo's Garden until December. Pauline Markham has been engaged for this spectacle.

"THE IDLE 'PRENTICE," H. B. Farnie's latest burlesque of "Jack Sheppard," will shortly be produced at one of the principal Broadway theatres.

MRS. MACREADY, a reciationist and dramatic reader, arrived in this city on Sept. 27th from Europe after an absence of ten years. She intends to give a series of entertainments throughout the country.

MME. LE BARRY, a distinguished pianist, and a pupil of Thalberg, arrived in this city from Europe during the past week.

COPIES OF A NEW PLAY, the "New York Burglar; or, a Wedding by Moonlight," which achieved success at its recent production at the Bowery Theatre, or the sole right for the production thereof, can be purchased as set forth in our advertising columns.

LENT'S NEW YORK CIRCUS is to commence the home season, at their establishment in Fourteenth street, on the 10th inst.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, during the past week, Billy Burgess, a pupil of Cool Burgess, appeared in Ethiopian eccentricities of the style that has made his tutor's name celebrated. He evinces considerable talent for the business of his choice, which only needs experience to render more attractive. Miss Emma Grattan, in her songs from popular burlesques, with rapid changes of costume, is popular, and deservedly so, as she possesses a fine voice, a comely person and dresses with becoming taste and richness. Her sweet, expressive face, surrounded with a mass of flaxen hair, is not among the least of her attractions. Mr. H. B. Harrison, the only English improvisatore in this country, delights his auditors with his impromptu hits at the topics of the day, and is deservedly encored each evening. George H. Coes played an effective banjo solo and sang several songs with a banjo accompaniment. Mlle. Nazzeri has been enthusiastically welcomed each evening in the ballet "La Fete de Lilas." Pankhurst and Collins have ocularly demonstrated the extent of rapidity to which graceful terpsichorean movements can be carried, while the veteran comedian, Charley White, has lost none of his humor and originality, and his interpolations of witty allusions to the topics of the day are ever spicy, and meet the approval of the audience. J. C. Stewart and J. F. Wambold have contributed largely to the mirth of the evening. On Thursday, 29th, the California comedian, Lew Rattler, made his first appearance in New York in a burlesque entitled "Clam-ell," and achieved success. He possesses rare comic abilities and kept the audience in continual laughter, so thickly did the puns and witticisms fall from his lips. At times he was a little broad, which may be attributed to the great license allowed in such performances in California, where he has for some time been performing. His own good judgment will suggest a curtailment of those portions of the act. We doubt not he will become a great favorite here. This week, in addition to all the artists that have appeared during the past week, Mlle. Venturoli and Mlle. Augusta, danseuses, and Miss Jennie Hughes, vocalist, will appear.

AT TONY PASTOR'S OPERA HOUSE during the past week, the business has been excellent, and the favorites have been warmly welcomed. The novelties announced for the present week will consist of a new Irish drama entitled "Pierce Fitzgerald, the Patriot of '98." Louisa Arnot, one of the Arnot Sisters, will make her first appearance here, appearing under the name of Louisa Bartine. Master Martin, whose representations of a monkey are very clever, will re-appear. The ubiquitous Emmasi, Quinny Clarence, will make his first appearance here. Jennie Benson, Tony Pastor, Johnny Wild, Frank Kerns and all the favorites will perform in various acts.

LOTTA, THE MERRY, SPRIGHTLY LITTLE ELF, continued at Niblo's during the past week in the play of "Heart's Ease," to large audiences, charming all with her vivacious acting, and introducing by the way of variety a jig and a banjo solo. To-night Oct. 3d, a change of bill will be made, when the "Ticket of Leave Man" will be produced with Lotta in the part of Sam Willoughby, in which she ought to be pre-eminently successful, as the character will afford her free scope for the display of her peculiar talents. The representation of that character to-night will be the first she has ever given in this city. The play will be presented for six nights only.

MR. EDWIN ADAMS is expending and constructing "Lorie" for Miss Maggie Mitchell, he has also given him a commission to write for her an original play which he anticipates having finished by next spring. He has just completed a play adapted to Joe Murphy's specialties, and will shortly start on a starring tour with that gentleman.

HARRY CUNNINGHAM, dramatic agent, 636 Broadway, still continues to attend to the wants of the profession. See his card elsewhere.

BIRCH, WAMBOLD, BERNARD AND BACKUS and their troupe of San Francisco Minstrels find no diminution in their audiences. They give a very enjoyable entertainment. The vocalism and instrumentation of the troupe is excellent, and their comic acts are always well performed.

THE NEW YORK BURGLAR; or, a Marriage by Moonlight," by Charles Foster, was played during the past week at the Bowery Theatre and achieved success. The story is interesting and the situations are effective. It is well acted throughout. This evening, Oct. 3d, Miss Marietta Ravel will commence a star engagement in a drama which has been written expressly for her by Mr. John de Bonay, entitled "Jargtine." The piece will be mounted with scenery especially prepared for it, and new costumes and appointments. The present engagement is the commencement of Miss Ravel's starring ing gent; Geo. C. Bryden, general business, and Mrs. Gray, leading woman.

MISS LUCILLE WESTERN has been the attraction at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, during the past week, playing the sentimental drama of "East Lynne," appearing in the characters of Lady Isabel and Madame Vine. Miss Western in these impersonations has the advantage of a fine stage appearance, and displays much ability; indeed, there are portions of the performance which are truly excellent, particularly in the last act, which is decidedly the best; the interview with her husband—or rather her former husband—is exceedingly touching and not overdrawn, aiming only to delineate truthfully the singular intensity of a nature, which claims our sympathies. A great fault of Miss Western is that she is altogether too demonstrative. The other characters were well sustained, and the piece was produced in good style. On Saturday, the 1st inst., Miss Western appeared as Nancy Sykes in "Oliver Twist." "East Lynne" has attracted crowded houses, and will be repeated every evening this week, except on Saturday, the last night of Miss Western's engagement, when "The Child Stealer," will be played. On Monday evening, October 10th, Rose and Harry Watkins will commence a limited engagement in "Trodden Down."

THE CHESTNUT STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, has passed into the hands of a new lessee, Mr. E. L. Davenport, the well known actor, who announces his intention of producing a dramatic entertainment of a superior class, and one that shall enable the Chestnut Street to hold a most honorable position. The inauguration under the new regime will take place on the 3d inst., when Wm. Horace Lingard and Alice Dunning with their comedy company will appear. The former engagement of the Lingard troupe at this house was very successful, and the present will, doubtless, be a repetition of their previous triumphs. Lingard will appear in his justly celebrated comic sketches nightly, and a series of light and sparkling comedies will be given with Miss Alice Dunning Lingard, Miss D. Lingard and Mr. G. C. Boniface in the principal characters.

FOX'S AMERICAN THEATRE, Philadelphia, which is crowded nightly, has one of the most complete variety troupes that ever appeared in that city. The programme is constantly varied and there is no lack of novelty. The negro eccentricities and delineations of Bob Harrison, John Mulligan, Charles Howard and John Pendy are happily rendered, and the corps will be augmented on Monday, the 3d inst., by the addition of Cool Burgess in his specialties. An agreeable portion of the evening's entertainment is the graceful and artistic evolutions of the ballet troupe engaged here, comprising Mlle. De Rose (who makes a re-appearance on the 3d inst.,) Mlle. Alexandrina, Dinetop sisters, Miss Susie Summerfield, Miss Minnie Weigle, Miss Millie Killmyer and twenty or thirty more young ladies. For the present week there is a complete change of programme, including two new ballets by George W. Smith, entitled "Demons of the Night" and "The Grape Pickers." Mr. Sidney Franks, comic vocalist, will also appear along with Miss Lizzie Kelsey and Miss Emma Alford, serio-comic vocalists. The Bloodgoods closed a successful ten weeks' engagement on the 1st inst.

WE HAVE NOTHING NEW to record at the Seventh Street Opera House, Philadelphia, where "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has held the stage during the past week, and been moderately successful in a pecuniary point of view. The present has been announced as the last week of this version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and we understand that it is the intention of the management to return to light and amusing operettas.

LEONA CAVENDER commenced a week's engagement at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., on the 26th ult., making her debut in John Brougham's new drama entitled "Minnie's Luck; or, Ups and Downs of City Life," in which she enacted the character of Clara Wilsonby with admirably, and created a decidedly pleasing impression. Coming to Troy unheralded and unknown, she has reason to feel proud of the flattering reception she received at the hands of the Trojans. Miss Cavender is a vivacious, graceful and fascinating little actress. Her manner is easy and natural, and her acting, in its every detail, a finished performance. She is also an accomplished vocalist, and her singing of the song, "Beautiful Dreamer," was encored nightly. She also plays the banjo and dances a jig, a la Lotta. The piece was put on the stage with great care and excellently acted by the stock company. "Minnie's Luck" held the boards the entire week to a succession of crowded houses. Robert McWade is the next attraction, opening Oct. 3d in "Rip Van Winkle." So writes our correspondent, "Moe," on Oct. 1st.

MRS. D. P. BOWERS closed the first week of her engagement at the Academy of Music, Buffalo, N. Y., on the 1st inst. The plays produced have given satisfaction, and were presented to full houses. The following was the repertoire during the week:—26th and 27th, "Hunted Down"; 28th and 29th, "Snare;" 30th (the occasion of Mrs. B.'s benefit), "Lady Audley's Secret"; 1st, "Lady Audley;" matinee, and "Lingonar" in the evening. The new stock company gave evidence of their ability, and especially Miss Lanergan and Georgia Langley, who, as Helen and Mary respectively, in "Snare," acquitted themselves satisfactorily. During the current week, "Mary Warner" and "Romance of the Rhine" will be produced. Much disappointment has been expressed that "Love's Masquerade" has not been produced. Edwin Adams is the current star, opening on the 3d inst. So writes our correspondent on Oct. 1st.

OF THEATRICALS IN DETROIT, MICH, our correspondent, "Frank," writing Oct. 1st, says:—"The dramatic season at the Opera House was inaugurated on Sept. 26th by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lanergan, supported by the best stock company ever together in Detroit. The opening piece was Love's Ring Fancifully Illustrated, which was given on Tuesday evening by 'Leah, the Forsaken;' 28th, 'East Lynne;' 29th, 'Still Waters Run Deep;' 30th, 'Merchant of Venice;' Oct. 1st, at the matinee, 'Fanchon,' and in the evening, 'Don Cæsar de Bazan.' The attendance during the week was fair, but not what the merits of the performances deserved. On Oct. 3d, Oliver Doud Byron will appear in his specialty of 'Across the Continent.'"

JAMES P. SHERRY'S DRAMATIC COMPANY performed in Scranton, Pa., during the past week. During the three days that the State Fair was held many people were turned from the doors, unable to obtain standing room even.

MISS LEONORA CREED, whose real name is Eliza Brokenshire, was married in Manistee, Mich., on Sept. 26th, to Mr. A. A. Spofford.

G. R. BARNARD recently joined the FOX and DENIER Pantomime Troupe, as leader of orchestra, at Indianapolis, Ind.

KATIE PUTNAM and her dramatic company commence a season of one week at Canton, Ill., on Oct. 10th.

LAURA KEENE and her dramatic company will commence a season of six nights at the Opera House, Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 3d.

E. L. DAVENPORT advertises in our columns that the dramatic season at the New Chestnut Street Theatre will commence about Nov. 7th. The performances prior to this date are referred to elsewhere. He can be addressed for the coming three weeks at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

"CENTRAL PARK" was produced at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 26th ult., for the first time in that city. The personation of Mrs. Kerr Flamberry by Mrs. John Drew was marked by much dramatic power and ability. Miss Lizzie Price's Flora was an exquisitely toned and genial impersonation. Barton Hill made a satisfactory representative of Otis, a fast young man about town. And Mr. Mackay filled the part of Flamberry to excellent advantage. "Central Park" has been played during the past week to a fair share of public patronage, and will occupy the boards the present week. The comedy is illustrated by new scenery, and the orchestral music is appropriate and effective. Wilkie Collins's dramatization of his novel "Man and Wife" is announced as being in rehearsal.

THINGS THEATRICAL in California are thus reviewed by our correspondent, "Sir Toby," under date of San Francisco, Sept. 24:—"Mr. F. S. Chanfrau opened an engagement at the California Theatre Sept. 19th under favorable conditions. An audience filled the theatre in every part, the warmest approval of the popular kind was expressed for his style of acting, and there could be no mistake as to that greeting extended him in honor of once having brightened the San Francisco scene. That was nearly two decades ago—in 1852—when he belonged to the Jenny Lind company, which included at that time such Thespians as Jas. Stark, Joe Proctor, Mrs. J. B. Booth and Miss Celeste. His acquaintance has been renewed by his impersonation of Sam. The deepening of line, heightening of florid coloring, and extreme breadth of treatment Chanfrau imparts to that overdrawn caricature, although adding inconsistency, is accomplished with a finish that justifies popularity. His facial acting is quite remarkable, while his attitudes are pictures in themselves, struck with a precision and ease only long experience could warrant. The supper was of the best, and included Edwards, Mestayer, Leathes, Raymond, Sedley Smith, Marie Gordon, May Howard, Minnie Walton, Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Judith. During the week commencing the 26th, the bill will be changed every two nights, 'Sam,' 'Ticket of Leave Man,' and 'Kit, the Arkansas Traveler,' being announced. Miss Rose Sherwell, from the Boston Theatre, is cast with Willoughby in the 'Ticket of Leave Man.' The distribution will be strong in the leading characters, John McCullough playing Hawkshaw; Chanfrau, Bob Brierly; Raymond, Melter Moss, and May Howard, May Edwards.....Maguire's Opera House will open to-night, the 24th, for a single performance, devoted as a farewell benefit to Miss Leo Hudson, whose failure at the Metropolitan Theatre was attributable, as a gentleman wrote the CLIPPER, partly to hard times, but more particularly—as was inferred in correspondence relative to her season—from inefficency of company and bad production of pieces. 'Putnam, or the Iron Son of '76,' and 'Jerry Abershaw' are to be performed. The volunteers are numerous, and prominently among them may be mentioned Frank Drew, G. W. Thompson, and Mrs. E. F. Keach. Miss Hudson intends paying a professional visit to Oregon in a month or two. .....The Alhambra, in the early portion of the week, was unfortunately compelled to close. Manager Smith has arrived from New York, and Miss Fanny Herring is under engagement, but up to the time of writing no announcement has been made in regard to future opening of the theatre.....A French Sanitary Fair is being held at the Pavilion, and although in operation but three days about $50,000 has been realized. A similar enterprise for the German relief fund of four days duration brought in $30,000. These affairs and the excitement attendant on the war, combined with a restricted state of business, makes it uncommonly bad for theatricals..... MacEvoy's Hibernicon, which is attracting the attention of the lyceum public, has had another successful week and will continue a short time longer.....No change in affairs at the Bella Union and Pacific theatres.....Interior Show News.—John McCullough's starring season at Proctor's Theatre, Sacramento, was successful. He appeared as Hamlet, Claude Melnotte and Charles Surface. .....Sallie Hinckley is rusting in 'Frou-Frou' at the Oro Fino, Portland, Oregon. Mr. Fernandez is shortly to be produced.....Emilie Melville has quite upset the Stockton people with her bright acting and sympathetic singing. .....Yankee Plummer is at Port Townsend, W. T.....The last accounts of the whereabouts of the equestrian establishments on the Pacific coast place the Overland Circus at Portland, 17th; Bartholomew's at Silver City, I. T., 17th; World Circus at Victoria, 11th.....Boulan and Murphy's Minstrels will play at Marysville, 28th.....Mrs. Edmonds (Miss Frank Gass) has re-appeared on the stage at Sacramento."

MRS. SCOTT SIDDONS plays a star engagement at the Opera House, Albany, N. Y., commencing on Oct. 10th.

THE BRITISH BLONDE BURLESQUE TROUPE play in Columbus, Ohio, this week, under the management of John Elister, and go thence to Indianapolis for Oct. 6th; Cleveland, Oct. 17th; Syracuse and Rochester the week commencing Oct. 24th, and Buffalo, 31st.

MCKEE RANKIN, Kitty Blanchard and John Dunn play a two weeks' engagement at the Opera House, St. Louis, commencing Oct. 24th, in "Rip Van Winkle."

LITTLE NELL, who made such a successful debut at the Opera House, Albany, N. Y., with her new piece of "Katy Did," opens at the Opera House, Troy, on the 31st inst. She has a few open weeks, as will be seen by her agent's card in another column.

T. J. HERNDON'S OPERA HOUSE COMPANY appeared at Malone, N. Y., during fair week, commencing on the 26th ult., to excellent houses. As a comedy organization this troupe is far in advance of anything we have had on our boards. The "Ticket of Leave Man" was presented on the 26th, and was well received. Bob Brierly was capitally rendered by Mr. J. A. Mulligan, a promising young actor. Herndon convulsed the audience with his eccentricities as Green Jones. Mrs. Herndon, as May Edwards, displayed her tarough appreciation of the character. Mrs. W. C. Miller exhibited a vivacancy as Sam which deserves special mention. The remainder of the company were well received. Mr. Ryder is a capital Old Man. They open at Potsdam Oct. 3d, thence "westward, ho!" So writes our correspondent, "Harvester."

FRANK MAYO opens in Cleveland, Ohio, on Oct. 24th and remains two weeks. He goes thence to Detroit for Nov. 7th.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, OMAHA, NEB., is announced to be opened for the fall and winter season on Oct. 10th, under the management of H. Cord. During the recess the entire interior of the theatre was torn out and has been completely rebuilt; a new stage, embracing all the modern improvements, has been built; the parquet and balcony have been supplied with large arm chairs; the walls and ceiling have been frescoed, and the decorations of the auditorium are in white and gold. An entire new stock of scenery has been constructed and a new curtain and act drop have been added. As Omaha is located on the direct line of railroad communication with San Francisco, stars visiting California can easily play a few nights here. The following stock company has been engaged: Mrs. Jenny Parker, leading; Edith Blande, soubrette; Mrs. H. Howard, old women; Misses Stevens and Willis; John D. Stevens, leading and stage manager; E. Clarke, heavy; W. H. Parrette, old man; Mr. O'Keefe, second old men; Mr. Hamilton, walking gent, and Mr. Duncan, responsible business. Annie Ward Tilbury will be the first star, commencing an engagement of one week on Oct. 17th, and will be followed by Mme. Methua-Scheller on the 24th, for twelve nights.

TONY DENIER makes his first appearance with the Fox and Denier pantomime troupe since his severe accident in Buffalo, at the Olympic Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., on Oct. 3d, where the troupe will play two weeks, and go thence to Memphis, Tenn., opening there Oct. 17th; thence to Danville, Ky., Oct. 24th.

Musical.

THE QUEEN SISTERS, Laura, Fanny and Julia, assisted by H. Farmer, flutist; W. T. Edge, baritone; Prof. de Nordendof, pianist; J. W. Britton, elocutionist, and C. W. Butler, buffo singer, are making a tour of the south. They performed in Lynchburg, Va., on Sept. 22d, and went thence towards Knoxville, Tenn.

CARLO LEFRANC, the eminent tenor, assisted by Miss Ada Rosenburg, prima donna; Sig. Reina, baritone; Sig. Susini, basso; Mons. C. Werner, violinist, and Sig. Nicolai, musical director, is announced to give one grand concert at City Hall, Portland, Me., on Oct. 8th, this being the inauguration of a tour through the country under the management of Sig. A. Biscaccianti.

LEAVITT'S BELL RINGERS are traveling in central New York and meeting with success, as the following notice, clipped from the Delhi Republican, shows:—"The Leavitt troupe of bell ringers gave one of their superb entertainments at the Court House, in this village, on Thursday evening last, to a crowded house. We have before been visited by the Peak, Breman and Spaulding troupes, and were satisfied with a single performance; not so with the Leavitt troupe, and we advise all who wish to spend an evening pleasantly, and get the full worth of their money, to go and hear them.

THE EICHBERG ENGLISH OPERA TROUPE produced the 'Two Cadis,' at Sink's Opera House, Rome, N. Y., Sept. 29th.

THE GRAND ENGLISH OPERA COMBINATION commence a season of two weeks at the Crosby Opera House, Chicago, Ill., on Oct. 3d. Monday, "Trovatore;" Tuesday, "Martana;" Wednesday, "Crown Diamonds;" Thursday, "Fra Diavolo;" Friday, "Huguenots;" Saturday, matinee, "Bohemian Girl;" evening, "Martha."

THE BERGEN FAMILY, BELL RINGERS, are said to be meeting with good success on their second annual tour. After three weeks in Indiana they returned to Michigan, and were at East Saginaw on the 26th and 27th ult.; Bay City, during the fair, 28th, 29th and 30th; Saginaw City, 1st inst., and are billed for Pontiac, 3d; Flint, 4th and 5th and Detroit, 6th, 7th and 8th. William Lavake and Helen C. Hayes, their new vocalists, are reported to be valuable acquisitions to the company, giving more variety to an entertainment in which, heretofore, instrumental music preponderated. Sol Smith Russell and Anna Berger continue as popular as ever, and the cornet band, with its quartet of female performers, is an attractive feature. This company will be at Dexter, Mich., on the 10th; Ypsilanti, 11th; Tecumseh, 12th; Monroe, 13th and Toledo, Ohio, 14th and 15th.

THE BRENNANS are at present giving their entertainments in Pennsylvania, and can be addressed care of this office.

CHEAP MUSIC.—One of the cheapest musical publications ever offered to the public is "Peters' Musical Monthly." The issue for October, now before us, contains twelve compositions, embracing songs and choruses, polkas, etc., the price of which is only 30 cents.

THE HASSLER BROTHERS, on the 1st inst., gave their initial matinee at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia. Sixty skilled musicians and forty drummers appeared in an admirably selected programme, which was rendered in an artistic manner. The matinees will be repeated every Saturday during the fall and winter season.

MLLE CHRISTINE NILSSON will make her first appearance in Philadelphia, in concert, on Oct. 12th. The Academy of Music has been engaged, and concerts will be given there on the 12th, 14th, 15th, 20th and 22d inst.

Variety Halls.

HEYWOOD'S COMBINATION appeared at Peekskill, N. Y., Sept. 30th and Oct. 1st, and is billed for Cold Spring 3d and 4th; Fishkill Landing, 5th and 6th; and Mattewan, 7th and 8th.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Vicksburg, Miss., has been opened as a Variety Theatre, under the management of B. S. Wheeler & Co., with D. J. Sprague as stage manager, Prof. Schneider as musical director, and the following artists:—Dora Dawson, the leading vocalist; Miss Miranda, balladist; Ada Le Forrest, character; W. A. Dolan, song and dance; Jimmy O'Brien, comedian; Sprague and Black, song and dance and double clog. In the minstrel part D. J. Sprague is the interlocutor, W. A. Dolan bones, and Jimmy O'Brien tambo. Business during the week ending Sept. 24th was excellent.

ESTELLA FORSMER, vocalist, joined the company at the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C., on Sept. 26th. She was a member of the company at the Old Canterbury, in that city, during the war, and has quite a list of admirers there. Clara Butler entered upon her fifth week on the 26th ult. She has thus far presented new songs each week and her repertoire seems to be inexhaustible. Marie Rocelle concluded her engagement on the 24th. The comical trio, Porter, Diamond and Brown, appeared last week in several humorous sketches, and Billy Dunawin was good in banjo solos. Josephine Walby, Koyara and Mlle. Henrietta executed their various acts and specialties in a satisfactory manner. October 3d the following performers will appear:—Bowman and Harris, double song and dance men; Mlle. Gracie, trapeze artist, and Harry Clark, Ethiopian comedian and gymnast. The feature of introducing four end men in the minstrel scene will be one of the attractions.

HARRY ROBINSON, the musical and facial artist, comedian and humorist, at present performing at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, Pa., where he can be addressed, states that he can be engaged after Oct. 15th.

FIRST CLASS TALENT is wanted at all times at Mozart Hall, Buffalo, N. Y. Apply as per advertisement.

MR. AND MRS. HARRY WATSON, the former a song and dance man and the latter a comic and serio-comic vocalist, advertise that they can be engaged for their regular business and specialties.

CONCERNING VARIETY MATTERS IN CINCINNATI our correspondent writes, Sept. 30th:—"The new Winter Garden variety theatre, on the corner of Fourth and Home streets, was inaugurated on Saturday evening last in the presence of a full house, and gave a very excellent entertainment. The uprolling of the curtain revealed a 'first part' of four men and eight ladies, seated in front of a very elegant back scene, designed expressly for the company. The two end men, Harrigan and Tom Williams, are extremely good, the former's musical 'gags' being very original. Harry Raynor, a burlesque actor, appeared as interlocutor, and Master Tony Hart in ballads. The best features of the programme were a couple of original double acts by Harrigan and Hickey, entitled 'Irish Fraud' and 'After the War.' In the former they personated a pitch and toss lass very cleverly, ringing in some capital songs and dances, and in the last they represented a couple in contrabands meeting after the war. The female portion of the company is hardly as strong as the male. Mollie Hustead, a handsome, well rounded little witch, who sings and dances cleverly; May Weaver (formerly Mrs. Clifford), a graceful danseuse, and Lucy Hall, balladist, are the most popular. Charley Wills, a kid, does a good clog, and Tom Williams maketh the banjo to ring. Miss Julia Barton and Miss Millie Dulan have been added this week. Some of those mentioned on the opening bills did not appear. Bix has been moderate through the week. Mr. Herbert is the manager of the house. He contemplates putting on a spectacle, which the fine scenery of the theatre will enable him to do well. ..... From the Race Street Lotta May has retired, which has been the only change. Lulu Wharton has taken the role of Frailty in the Can-can. Celia Ilert performs the statue business, for which she possesses the requirements. Addie Sprague, Fanny Wood, Minnie Baker, Belle Ilerd, Weaver, Mason and Wood combine to furnish a very amusing entertainment. On Monday next, 3d, the Hawley Brothers, cloggists, are to open.....The only new appearances at the Alhambra this week have been Bobby Scott, cloggist and song and dance man, and Lotta May, the banjoist. Mr. Frank Wood and Miss Nellie Anderson are engaged for next (this) week. John and Maggie Fielding did not come to time this week, as had been announced, owing it is said to sickness.....At the Academy of Music there are two new end men this week. Jeff Howard and Johnny Connor, and four new lady performers, viz.:—Mlle. Augusta, Sadie Lloyd, Mollie St. Martin and Emma St. Martin. Nellie Anderson has closed."

IN OUR LAST we gave credence to a statement based upon what purported to be a card from Mr. William E. Sinn, announcing that he had leased the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for the purpose of giving a variety entertainment there. We have been requested by Mr. Sinn to state that the card in question was unauthorized by him, and that he has no intention of leasing that theatre.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich., notwithstanding the counter attractions, the houses show no failing off. The company was further enlarged on the 29th ult., by the addition of the "Empire Boys"—Billy Welch and Johnny Rice—who are excellent dancers. The Laurence Troupe are billed to appear Oct. 3d.

GEORGE WILD made his first appearance at Wray's Theatre in Lancaster, Pa., on Sept. 26th, and Murray and Laugalin closed on Oct. 1st.

AT DAN SHELBY'S EXCHANGE THEATRE, Indianapolis, Ind., the company, on Sept. 24th, was reinforced by the appearance of the following artists:—Annie Williams, a clever dancer; Agnes Robinson, a pleasing serio-comic; A. R. Campbell, comic vocalist and character dancer, and John C. Clarke, bones and interlocutor, who has also assumed the direction of amusements. The theatre was packed on the occasion, and business has continued good during the past week. On Sept. 29th, Bob Smith, Ethiopian comedian, was announced to appear.

H. J. SARGENT'S ALHAMBRA STAR COMPANY, from the Metropolitan, Indianapolis, Ind., appeared in Fort Wayne, Sept. 26th and 27th; Logansport, 28th, and Lafayette, 30th, returning to Indianapolis on Oct. 1st, when Gus Williams was announced to appear. J. S. Berry and Nellie Wilson close on the 1st, and leave for Kansas City. Emma Devoy and Anna Blake also leave for Chicago.

WESTON'S OPERA HOUSE, Buffalo, N. Y., has received a fair share of patronage during the past week. G. S. Knight made his first appearance on the 28th, and made a decided hit in his "Teutonic Transformations." A change has taken place in the management of the stage and orchestra, A. M. Sloan succeeding Robert Butler, and J. A. Tuthill as leader of orchestra in place of Mr. Bernard. Miss Lucy Adams was the recipient of a benefit on the 30th inst., and was greeted by a good house, considering the inclement weather. The current star is Miss Harrison, opening on the 3d.....Frank Wild's has replaced the old name of the Varieties, Buffalo. An explanation below will show. Business is fair. Miss Laura Edmonds is the latest arrival, and is fast gaining favor. The Mr. Armitage, who was lately taken as partner by Mr. Wild, was arrested on the 28th by Police Commissioner Best on the charge of robbing the National Express Company of $8,000. It appears that Armitage alias Morrison, was in the employ of that company as messenger between Troy and Rutland, and after the robbery, which was perpetrated on the road, fled to this city where his lavish display of greenbacks excited the suspicion of the detectives, who, after shadowing him for some time, arrested him as stated above. In justice to Mr. Wild, it should be said that the man came to him representing himself as just from California, and wishing to make an investment, was anxious to embark in the show business, etc. Wild did all in his power, subsequent to the discovery of the thief, to assist the officers in the discharge of their duties. So writes our correspondent "Frank."

Negro Minstrelsy.

HORACE A. CHASE, JR., well known in the minstrel profession, having at various times been manager and at others the general agent of minstrel troupes, died at Bath, Steuben county, N. Y., at the residence of his parents, on Sept. 24th, aged 36 years. He was of a genial disposition, and endeared all to him with whom he came in contact. His loss will be sincerely mourned by his numerous friends.

DAN BRYANT'S MINSTRELS closed their season at Norwalk, Conn., on Sept. 26th.

JOHNNY ALLEN'S MINSTRELS appeared in the Masonic Temple, Louisville, Ky., for the week Sept. 26th and 29th. Our correspondent says the company is a strong one, and was well patronized. They are billed to commence a season of one week at the Fifth Street Opera House, St. Louis, Mo., on Oct. 3d.

DELEHANTY, HENGLER AND BLOODGOOD'S TROUPE is billed to perform in Troy, N. Y., Oct. 4th and 5th, and Albany, 7th and 8th.

THE MORRIS BROTHERS' MINSTRELS appeared in Skowhegan, Me., on Sept. 27th; Dover, 28th; Dexter, 29th, and Bangor, 30th.

GUS. FOSTER, clog and song and dance artist, advertises that he can be engaged after Oct. 10th.

A YOUNG MAN of ability and experience who can take the end, do an essence and a good stump speech, and who has a burlesque specialty, advertises that he can be engaged.

A NEW COMIC SONG AND DANCE, "How Dat Vas for High," can be had of Benham Bros., who advertise.

"WHERE THE WOODBINE TWINETH" is Delehanty & Hengler's last sensation song and dance, the words by W. H. Delehanty, and the melody by Mrs. Delehanty. It has just been published by White, Smith & Perry, of Boston.

MRS. KENT'S FEMALE MINSTRELS performed in the Harrington Opera House, Providence, R. I., on Oct. 1st. They are billed to appear in Fall River, Mass., Oct. 4th; New Bedford, 5th and 6th; North Bridgewater, 7th; Taunton, 8th; Lawrence, 10th; Lynn, 11th; Waltham, 12th; Haverhill, 13th; and Lowell, 14th and 15th.

JOHN HOGAN, of Manning's Minstrels, Chicago, Ill., has recently been victimized by a fellow named Davenport, a minstrel performer, in Seneca, N. Y., who married into a respectability, but bringing a letter of introduction to Mr. William Manning, the proprietor of the above minstrel troupe. Mr. Manning being unable to give him employment, generously paid his hotel bill for one week at the Metropolitan. At the end of that time, he still being out of employment, Messrs. Hogan and Hughes kindly volunteered to continue paying his board bill, which they did for two weeks, when seeing that Davenport did not exert himself to obtain a situation, they felt justified in refusing so to do, and accordingly notified the landlord, who requested Davenport to find other quarters. Late on Sunday night, the 25th, Davenport came to Mr. Hogan and told him he was hungry and had no place to sleep. The latter, pitying his condition, gave him a good supper and told him again to the Metropolitan and provided him with a bed. On the morning, when he arose, he went to Mr. Hogan's room and asked for a collar. He was told to help himself. He stepped over to the bureau, put on a collar, and seeing a valuable diamond pin belonging to Hogan lying in one of the drawers, picked it up and hurriedly departed, and has not since been seen. The pin was valued at $300. This is one of the largest cases of ingratitude we ever heard of. One must be base indeed to rob the hand that fed him.

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE has been well attended during the past week by fashionable audiences. The feature of the present week will consist of the burlesque opera entitled "Ill-True-Bad-Doer," which will be elaborately placed upon the stage, with Eugene as Lenora, Unsworth as the Count d'Lunatic. In addition Billy Sheppard will appear in a favorite song and dance, Billy Rice in an act entitled the "Tragic Revival," and the other artists in a varied programme embracing many novelties.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS are billed in Peoria, Ill., Oct. 7th; Bloomington, 8th and 10th; Springfield, 11th and 12th.

ADA TEMAN'S FEMALE MINSTREL TROUPE occupied Sink's Opera House, Rome, N. Y., on Sept. 26th;

JENNIE KIMBALL, with a full variety troupe, comprising Elise Jordan, J. H. O'Neil, Frank Edwards, and the Lamont Brothers is billed to appear in the Music Hall, Taunton, Mass., on Oct. 4th, 5th and 6th.

THE HOWARD ATHENÆUM, Boston, has had Cool Burgess, Rizarelli Brothers, Carrie and Charles Austin, Hughey Dougherty and Joe Murphy, and all the regular troupe during the past week.

COMIC SINGERS and negro performers are wanted for Harry Hill's Concert Hall, in this city. Apply as per advertisement.

PEDANTO, the trapezeist, is at present performing at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa., where he can be addressed in relation to future engagements, which he is prepared to accept after Oct. 17th.

AT SMITH'S NEW OPERA HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., Maude de Lisle, ballad singer; Frank Bennett and Charles Adams, Ethiopian comedians, constituted the fresh attraction during the past week. In addition the following principal artists have appeared:—Cecile, dancer; Nellie Huntley, comic singer; Gilday and Gilroy, double clog. In the minstrel part four end men have appeared—Frank Bennett and James Gilroy, bones; Charles Gilday and Charles Adams, tambo; Harry Goodman, interlocutor.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Nashville, Tenn., is the only place of amusement now open in that city, and is doing a good business. Lizzie Whalen commenced an engagement on Sept. 26th. She is an old favorite there. Mlle. Albertina withdrew on the 24th and left for Vicksburg, Miss. Mlle. Dulin's burlesque pantomime entitled the "Baker's Apprentice" nightly concluded the performance during the week and was acceptably performed.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., is doing a fine business under the management of Messrs. Nachmann & Co. Since my last, Mlle Bertie, a representative of classical statuary, put in an appearance, and was well received. Christie Morel, Emma Devere and Carrie Bentley, are still here. Julia May and Estella Hyams, left, the former for Boston, and the latter for Washington. Julia May was one of the most popular performers Richmond has ever had. She sings fairly and dresses with great taste, and her changes are rapidly executed. Miss Estella Hyams will return from the Metropolitan (Washington, D. C.,) on Oct. 17th. Two gold medals are to be presented to Mlle Gracie and Harry Clark, by their friends. The design is beautiful, and they will cost $50 each. The presentation will take place on Saturday night, previous to their departure for Washington. Dick Parker and Billy Diamond appear Oct. 3d, and Kate Harkins and Joe Murphy, Oct. 10th. So writes our correspondent, "J. B. R."

A FIRST CLASS COMPANY is wanted for Frank Wild's Opera House, late Barton's Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., which is to open on Jan. 2, 1871. Address as per advertisement.

MR. AND MRS. HARRY WATSON, the former a song and dance man and the latter a comic and serio-comic vocalist, advertise that they can be engaged for their regular business and specialties.

COURTNEY & SANFORD'S GREAT AMPHITHEATRE, WILLOW STREET, LIMA, PERU.

This new and magnificent amphitheatre, built expressly for Messrs. Courtney & Sanford, is one of the largest and most beautiful places of amusement in South America. It was built by its energetic managers and proprietors in the short space of 30 days, and in consideration of the ability, perseverance and tact displayed by these gentlemen, the national government of Peru have issued to them a free and protective license for the term of one year. The theatre contains 95 boxes, 1,250 chairs in the parquet circle, 2,000 seats in the lower and 800 in the upper gallery. It is lighted by 350 gas lights, has a stage 40x60 feet, with a complete set of scenery. The company at present is composed of over sixty versatile performers, and is meeting with unbounded success. The receipts during the months of July and August were over sixty thousand dollars, and the press of Lima speak of the Amphitheatre in the most flattering manner. The company is headed by the celebrated Bell family—whose performances are received with the greatest enthusiasm—Mr. Julio Bulalay and wife, the Arabian Brothers Ali, Adolfo Bernabo, Jose Pineda, Jose Camilo Rodriques, Misses Pinsuti, Masetti, Lisanova, Aman Chang, wife and son, Chiariski, Leiscell Brothers, John Guest and wife, John Waldo, Carlos Separini, &c., &c., are all members of the troupe. The company will play in Lima during the present season, and go thence to Santiago and Valparaiso, returning to Lima again in the month of December. The stud of horses comprises Hiram, Duke, Bucephalus, Black Prince, Puebla, Arabiano, Mexico, Coquette, Lara, etc., etc. Mr. Sanford is at present in this city, and, we understand, is ready to contract with first class talent for the fall and winter season, and also for the coming summer. Address care of CLIPPER office. 27-1t*
